SENATE TO ABOLISH OLD SECRECY RULE; DEBENTURE IS LOST

Farm Bill Will Be Rushed; Hoover Gets Census Bill

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Riding over the protests of former secrecy advocates, the senate moved today to change its 140 year old rule of considering presidential nominations in executive session, and to provide for publication of all future secret roll calls.

While no senator is openly opposed to the change, a small group of Republican leaders want to put off action upon it until fall. The situation is such, however, that they must filibuster if they want to delay a vote.

The Jones amendment proposing the change is now the pending business of the senate, made so late yesterday by a forty-five to twenty-nine vote.

If the Jones amendment is adopted within the next few days as scheduled, the way will be cleared for a summer recess of congress the middle of next week.

All other important business was brushed aside when both houses moved to clear up matters pending in the senate for the last few weeks.

After the house voted 250 to 113 against the debenture farm relief provision the senate adopted the census reapportionment forty-eight to thirty-seven. Then the senate refused to take up repeal of the national origins provision of the immigration act by a vote of thirty-seven to forty-three.

These measures had been in an apparently hopeless jam for a week, with matters rapidly growing worse, when finally, under a blistering June day sun, the perspiring congressmen gave in.

House and senate conferees on the farm bill were meeting today to endorse again the administration bill minus the debenture feature. The plan is to report the bill to the house at noon, seek to pass it this afternoon and then rush it through the senate. There will be no debate in the house.

Passage of the census and reapportionment bill sent that measure to the president for signature, the first major item of legislation to reach him from congress since the special session began.

Action against repeal of the national origins law definitely blocked any possibility of changing the law at this time. The national origins quota basis bill will go into effect July 1, over the protests of President Hoover who wanted congress to repeal it.

Twenty-four Republicans deserted him, combining with nineteen Democrats to prevent consideration of the Nye repealer. Standing with the president on the issue were twenty-six Republicans including all of the so-called progressives and one farmer-laborite. His defeat was worked by those who usually support him, like Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, Jones, of Washington and Moses, of New Hampshire.

While tariff hearings were continuing in the senate finance committee, a movement was started on the floor to instruct the committee to confine tariff revision to rates on agricultural products. A resolution proposing such instructions has been introduced by Senator Borah of Idaho and will come up for action today.

The move to change the secrecy system was instituted after publication by the United Press of the secret senate roll on the nomination of Roy O. West to be secretary of interior and received impetus later when the United Press published the secret vote on Irvin L. Lenroot to be judge of the United States court of customs appeals.

FATHER SUES SON FOR FALSE ARREST

COLUMBUS, O., June 14.—Charges of abduction and false incarceration for a son are contained in a suit for $25,000 damages filed in Common Pleas court here by Joseph Slater against his son, C. C. Slater, president of the Columbus Railway, Light and Power Co.

The elder Slater declares that his son and Dr. Earl E. Gaver, owner of the Gaver Sanatorium, entered a collusion and deprived him of his liberty, all care, attention, visitation, between June 18 and July 19, 1925.

The petition also avers that during his stay in the hospital, Slater was strapped to a cot, and handcuffed in such manner as to cause severe wounds

GOVERNOR WILL NOT CALL GUARDSMEN TO PREVENT GAMBLING

Plans For Racing Continue Despite Cooper Attack

COLUMBUS, O., June 14.—Despite his determination to stop gambling in connection with dog and horse races, Governor Myers Y. Cooper has no present intention of straining his authority as governor to the extent of attempting to use National Guardsmen as a means of enforcing the anti-gambling laws.

Proposals made to the governor that he adopt this procedure have already been disregarded and will continue to be, according to a spokesman for the administration. The governor and his advisors, it was stated authoritatively, take the position that the civil authorities have ample power and must use this power to enforce the laws in their own communities.

Former Atty. Gen. C. C. Crabbe, while waging a war of his own against race track gambling, insisted that the governor of the state could legally send national guard officers or troops to the racetracks to make arrests and generally enforce the law. Other officials, however, point out that the law is rather specific in providing under what circumstances the chief executive may call out state troops and that the element of violence cited in the statute as a necessary condition warranting such action has been absent in the present situation.

CLEVELAND, O., June 14.—Plans for the three race meets in Cuyahoga County this summer were announced today while Gov. Myers Y. Cooper was reported considering use of a special grand jury to probe conditions in two counties where races now are going on.

Dogs are racing at the West Jefferson track in Madison County, and horses have been running at Bainbridge Park in Geauga County since May 25. The "contribution" system of wagering is in use at both places.

Gov. Cooper's suggestions to the local officials that they halt gambling in their counties has failed to bring action. Prosecutor Dean Richmond of Madison County, after a conference with the governor and attorney general Wednesday, again announced that he would not interfere with operations at the dog track.

Prosecutor Richard Bestwick of Geauga County has told the governor that he has no complaints about Bainbridge Park, and indicated that he would not bother the "contributors" and operators of the "contribution" system.

Success of the race meets in other counties has encouraged promoters to plan meetings here, it was said.

As a concession to merchants and business men who in other years charged that long drawn out meetings were interfering with business, the promoters have decided to hold short sessions.

Grand circuit racing is scheduled for July 1 to 6 at North Randall. Meetings of twelve days each will be held at both Thistlewood and Cranwood later in the summer, it was reported.

FORMER DRY AGENTS FACE PRISON TERMS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 14.—Roy Miller and Clarence Gossett, Madisonville, Ky., former U. S. dry agents, sentenced to serve two years in the state penitentiary for manslaughter, were free on $500 bond each today after having been refused a new trial.

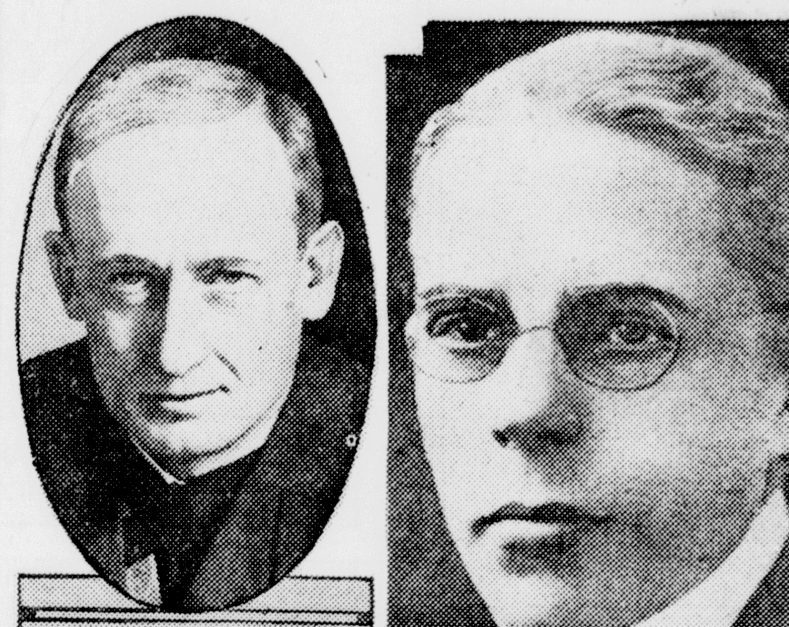

The two were convicted at the April session of federal court at Paducah in the killing of Frank Sears near Madisonville in 1925. They said they shot in self-defense after he threatened them with a shotgun.

GAVUZZI LEADING AS RACE NEARS END

SAN DIEGO, Calif., June 14.—With the finish post in Los Angeles only three days away, Peter Gavuzzi, the bearded Englishman, held his lead in C. C. Pyle's cross country footrace today, as the runner started to San Clemente, sixty-eight miles away.

Elapsed time leaders: Peter Gavuzzi, England, 498:33.48; John Sajo, Passaic, N. J., 498:53.44; Guisto Umek, Italy, 512:10.58.

TORCH SLAYER IS CONVICTED

Henry Colin Campbell, upper right, convicted of the torch murder of Mrs. Mildred Mowry Campbell, has appealed for a new trial. Judge Clarence Case, upper left, presided at his trial at Elizabeth, N. J. During the trial Campbell pleaded guilty to the murder of Mrs. Mildred Mowry Campbell, his wife, appears lower right.

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 14.—Counsel for Henry Colin Campbell prepared today to appeal from a verdict of a jury in the court of Oyer and Terminer that the defendant was guilty of murdering Mrs. Mildred Mowry.

Although Justice Clarence Case sentenced Campbell to die in the electric chair on July 15, it appeared unlikely that the sentence would be carried out before autumn at least. The court of errors and appeals, to which Francis A. Gordon, counsel for Campbell, must file his appeal, does not meet until fall, so it was apparent that the appeal automatically would serve as a stay of execution.

The jury was out for four hours yesterday. They returned twice, once to ask to have testimony of two physicians re-read and the other time to seek an interpretation of the legislature's provision that life imprisonment could be substituted for death in first degree murder cases. The court declined both requests.

Modernism as dangerous as Bolshevism, minister says

The fundamentalist-modernist question in general was given an airing from the conservative standpoint by Dr. F. N. McMillan, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, and radio orator of prominence, who addressed the Thursday evening session of the Cedarville College Bible Conference on the subject: "The Menace of Modernism."

This menace is more than an academic matter, Dr. McMillan asserted. "It is a menace to government, to homes, religion, intelligence and common sense. It is as dangerous to the church as Bolshevism is to government."

The speaker deplored the liberal tendencies of certain universities and ministers.

Another inspiring address at the evening session Thursday was made by Dr. Clarence E. Houk, New Concord, O., on the subject, "What of the Morrow," in which he spoke of a higher spiritual life.

Dr. Leander S. Keyser, of the Hama Divinity School, Springfield, widely known as a speaker of ability, addressed the conference Thursday afternoon on "Science and the Bible." He stressed harmony between religion and science and his remarks made an impression on the assembled ministers, church workers and faculty members.

Church workers were also outspoken in their praise of Mrs. H. E. Eavey, Xenia, who gave the first of a series of Bible talks at the afternoon meeting. Because of the crowded program the vespers service in charge of Prof. J. H. (Continued On Page Ten)

CLINIC DISASTER PROBE MAY PRODUCE DEFINITE RESULTS

Recall Steamfitter In Effort To Fix Blast Cause.

CLEVELAND, O., June 14.—Possibility of more definite and startling results from the investigation into the cause of the Cleveland Clinic disaster were seen today as Coroner A. J. Pearce and Prosecutor Ray T. Miller continued their secret investigation.

Miller and Pearce both visited the scene of the disaster again yesterday, after it was learned that Buffery Boggs, steamfitter, had been recalled before the city probing committee for re-examination.

The exact trend of the probe could not be learned from county officials. City investigators, however, questioned Boggs about the use of cigarettes in the X-ray storage room where death dealt its origin and about the use of an extension electric lamp and cord.

County investigators, it was reported, were centering their investigation on the condition of a steam pipe running through the room.

Boggs had been called to repair the leak in the pipe. He said he found it too hot to work on, and after asking that the live steam be turned off, he had left the clinic, returning an hour and a half later. It was then that he discovered smoldering matter in the X-ray storage room, and in an effort to use a fire extinguisher on the smoke, remained until an explosion blew him from the room.

Fines assessed in cases prosecuted amounted to $71,800. State agents conducted 455 investigations involving suspected law violators and "speakeasies," captured twenty-eight rum runners, and seized fifty-one stills.

BRIEFS FILED

CINCINNATI, June 14.—Reply briefs sustaining his petition for a new trial were filed by counsel for Bert B. Buckley in the federal court of appeals here.

The federal court last week decided that Buckley would not lose his right to appeal through the technicality of time expiration.

REPORT THREE KILLED IN DRY DOCK EXPLOSION

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 14.—An explosion shattered one end of the Robbins drydock here today taking a loss of life.

A few minutes after the explosion company officials said that three bodies had been recovered. They were of Thomas Kennedy, Christopher Kelly, and Philip Burns. Several other men were reported seriously injured.

One half of the floating drydock was reported to be damaged.

MURDER SUSPECT IS EVADING POLICE AS SEARCH CONTINUES

Many Cues Fail To Produce Tallman For Police

SAN FRANCISCO, June 14.—Craftier even than "The Fox" who terrorized the Pacific coast for a week in December, 1927, William Loren Tallman, 23, Los Angeles murder suspect, made authorities dizzy today as they rushed here and there in response to scores of clues from persons seeking rewards.

Detectives were traveling in circles looking for the handsome radio operator who probably could unravel much of the mystery surrounding the "brick bat" slaying of pretty Mrs. Virginia Patty in Los Angeles—just as they did in 1927 when hunting William Edward Hickman, "The Fox."

Nine times in the last few days squadrons have turned out like firemen answering a third alarm because of similarity in physical characteristics between innocent persons and the suspect.

Traffic was halted and the sidewalk in front of a local theater jammed with blue coats and reporters when some one said Tallman was watching the show.

An unconscious man in a gas filled room attracted a score of San Francisco's best detectives, just as had the body of a man in San Francisco Bay who talked in nearly every respect except fingerprints with the man who has been missing more than a week since vanishing from his stateroom on the S. S. Admiral Benson.

Motorists have been chased in Astoria, Ore., where water soaked clothing of a traveler aroused suspicion. In Los Angeles a young man answering the description of Tallman tied a woman to a chair with towels and in Marin County near here a youth acted "nervous"—both episodes attracting wild attention from speeding police squads.

PAST ELKS RULER DIES AT MEETING

TOLEDO, O., June 14.—Handing back the gavel after officiating at the initiation of three Elks' Club candidates, Charles T. Lawton, 54, dropped dead in the lodge hall here last night.

Lawton, a past exalted ruler, had substituted for the exalted ruler in the initiatory ceremony but a few minutes before his death, caused by a heart attack.

Lawton sought the Republican nomination for congress four years ago.

DISMISSES DRY ENTRAPMENT CASE

WASHINGTON C. H., June 14.—Supporting evidence is required to secure a conviction on a liquor charge when entrapment methods are used, Probate Judge Ed A. Murray held in dismissing a case against Mrs. Mary Frederick, 45, and her son Harold, 21.

Contradicting evidence is said to have marked the case presented by Prohibition Agent Edward McGaw, who made the arrest.

VETERANS CONVENE

MANSFIELD, June 14.—The eleventh annual convention of the Rainbow Division of Ohio opened here today, with more than 500 members present.

KILLED BY TRAIN

CHILLICOTHE, June 14.—The body of Edward Searles, 48, of Jackson, father of nine children, was found along the railroad tracks here. It is believed he lost his hold in attempting to board a freight train.

YOUTH FATALLY SHOT; FOUR COMPANIONS FACE CHARGES

CLEVELAND, June 14.—Four boys ranging in age from 15 to 16 today were to face juvenile court on delinquency charges as a result of the fatal shooting late yesterday of Andrew Zelinka, 13.

Zelinka and three friends, John Popick, 11, Harry Talip, 10 and Charles Jackman, 11, were playing together near the B. and O. tracks here.

Unknown to them another group of four with a small caliber rifle, was playing a short distance away.

HAMMER SLAYER IS CAUGHT; ADMITS HE MURDERED WORKER

Boasts Bring Arrest Of Negro; Says He Was Drunk

CINCINNATI, O., June 14.—Boasts to a fellow worker that he had killed and robbed a man led to the arrest of Jesse Keith, 41, Negro laborer, and his subsequent confession today that he had slain a man believed to be Robert McDonald, railroad worker, Toledo.

The skull crushed by a rivet hammer, McDonald's body was found yesterday in a tool shed.

"I was drunk and we got to arguing. I don't know what about, but he hit me in the jaw," Keith told detectives.

A charge of murder was placed against Keith.

Frank Marzetta, fellow worker of Keith, had reported Keith's statement that he had killed a man, and that he intended to return late to get additional money from the victim's clothes.

Keith denied to police that he had robbed McDonald. In the slain man's pockets was found twenty-three cents, and a time-sheet showing he was to collect a month's pay from the Big Four R. R. in Bellefontaine.

Keith told the detectives that after the slaying he went to his home and remained in a drunken stupor until the following day.

POLICE TO ATTEND GANGSTER FUNERAL

CLEVELAND, O., June 14.—Police will attend the funeral of Sam "Black Jack" Todero, murdered corn sugar merchant, tomorrow, but they will not act as an escort for the cortege. Safety Director Edwin D. Barry reiterated today.

Barry, enraged at private announcements of funeral plans calling for a police escort, also declared that arrangements to have a band and pretentious funeral parade would be opposed under traffic regulations.

Police have been unable to uncover the whereabouts of Angelo Lonardo, 21, son of the murdered "Big Joe" Lonardo who has been indicted for the slaying of Todero.

Dominick Suspirato, uncle of the boy, also is missing. He and Mrs. Concetta Lonardo, mother of Angelo, have been indicted for "aiding and abetting" in the murder.

BLAME POISON BOOZE

COLUMBUS, June 14.—Coroner J. A. Murphy today attributed the deaths of Tor Peterson, 38, and his wife, Ada, 35, whose bodies were found in their home here, to poison liquor. A blind roomer passed the bodies a number of times before neighbors discovered the dead couple.

FRENCHMEN CHANGE COURSE; REPORTED HEADED FOR AZORES

Completes Half Of Flight; Weather Is Smiling

NEW YORK, June 14.—The Yellow Bird has changed its course and headed for the Azores or the coast of Portugal because of a shortage of gas, Marius Rollin of the French line steamer Rochambeau notified his offices here by radio today.

Capt. Rollin said he received a message from the plane early today reporting that the fliers feared their fuel would not hold out until they reached France.

Capt. Rollin's message follows: "Have caught a 12:30 a. m. message somewhat blurred from FAX (the Yellow Bird's call letters) saying on account of having used up gasoline heading towards Azores and Portuguese coast."

NEW YORK, June 14.—The French monoplane Yellow Bird, speeding eastward over the Atlantic Ocean toward Paris, early today apparently had completed more than half of its chartered route from Old Orchard, Me.

Eighteen hours after the three adventurous French fliers—Armando Lotti, Jean Assolant and Rene Lafevre—had lifted the great plane in a beautiful take off from the sands of Old Orchard the Yellow Bird was believed to have covered something more than 1,800 miles.

Early today the naval radio station at Bar Harbor, Me., reported that the American Farmer had communicated with the Yellow Bird at 11 p. m. E. S. T., yesterday and that at that hour the French fliers reported all was well.

The Yellow Bird by that time was believed to have traveled nearly 1,400 miles, maintaining an average of more than 100 miles an hour.

Previously the United States shipping board steamer Wytheville had reported sighting the Yellow Bird 550 miles east and south of Old Orchard.

As the Yellow Bird continued its flight, aided by weather which was described as "the best since Lindbergh flew to Paris," those ashore who were following its progress were attempting to check the report that a stowaway had succeeded in getting aboard the plane before its take-off.

The Old Orchard boys said a youth named Arthur Schneider had secreted himself aboard the ship in the confusion surrounding the start. Aviation experts generally doubted that such a feat was possible.

The Wytheville reported.

POLICE CONTINUE SLOT MACHINE DRIVE

CLEVELAND, June 14.—Notice that police will continue to seize slot machines found within the city limits was served today in a petition on file in Common Pleas Court asking dissolution of a temporary injunction against police.

The petition was filed by Law Director Carl F. Shuler, who asked that Judge George P. Baer dissolve the order restraining police from touching the machines.

Judge Baer said the order would remain in effect until the suit for a permanent injunction, filed by Walter E. Matthias, local representative of slot machine interests, is heard.

Shuler, in his petition, charged that the presence of the machines in the city tends to increase crime, said the machines had been proving gambling devices and that police would continue to confiscate them.

BORDER PATROLMAN CLEARED OF MURDER

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The treasury today cleared Customs Border Patrolman Emmet J. White, of culpability in connection with the killing of Henry Virkula, a Big Falls, Minn., confectioner.

"Newspaper reports describing the shooting are highly colored to put it mildly," Assistant Secretary Seymour Lowman declared. "White apparently was acting within his authority under the law and has a perfect defense to the charges against him."

"If he is indicted in the local court, a motion will be made for transfer to the U. S. court in that district. A customs border patrolman is entitled to have all charges against him decided by a jury of his peers, the same as any other citizen."

SENATE TO ABOLISH OLD SECRECY RULE; DEBENTURE IS LOST

Farm Bill Will Be Rushed; Hoover Gets Census Bill

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Riding over the protests of former secrecy advocates, the senate moved today to change its 140 year old rule of considering presidential nominations in executive session, and to provide for publication of all future secret roll calls.

While no senator is openly opposed to the change, a small group of Republican leaders want to put off action upon it until fall. The situation is such, however, that they must filibuster if they want to delay a vote.

The Jones amendment proposing the change is now the pending business of the senate, made so late yesterday by a forty-five to twenty-nine vote.

If the Jones amendment is adopted within the next few days as scheduled, the way will be cleared for a summer recess of congress the middle of next week.

All other important business was brushed aside when both houses moved to clear up matters pending in deadlock for the last few weeks.

After the house voted 250 to 113 against the debenture farm relief provision the senate adopted the census reapportionment forty-eight to thirty-seven. Then the senate refused to take up repeal of the national origins provision of the immigration act by a vote of thirty-seven to thirty-three.

These measures had been in an apparently hopeless jam for a week, with matters rapidly growing worse, when finally, under a blistering June day sun, the perishing congressmen gave in.

House and senate conferees on the farm bill were meeting today to endorse again the administration bill minus the debenture feature. The plan is to report the bill to the house at noon, seek to pass it this afternoon and then rush it through the senate. There will be no debate in the house.

Passage of the census and reapportionment bill sent that measure to the president for signature, the first major item of legislation to reach him from congress since the special session began.

Action against repeal of the national origins law definitely blocked any possibility of changing the law at this time. The national origins quota basis bill will go into effect July 1, over the protests of President Hoover, who wanted congress to repeal it.

Twenty-four Republicans deserted him, combining with nineteen Democrats to prevent consideration of the Nye repealer. Standing with the president on the issue were twenty-six Republicans including all of the so-called progressives and one farmer-laborite. His defeat was worked by those who usually support him, like Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, Jones, of Washington and Moses, of New Hampshire.

While tariff hearings were continuing in the senate finance committee, a movement was started on the floor to instruct the committee to confine tariff revision to rates on agricultural products. A resolution proposing such instructions had been introduced by Senator Borah of Idaho and will come up for action today.

The move to change the secrecy system was instituted after publication by the United Press of the secret senate roll on the nomination of Roy O. West to be secretary of interior and received impetus later when the United Press published the secret vote on Irvine L. Lenroot to be judge of the United States court of customs appeals.

COLUMBUS, O., June 14.—Charges of abduction and false imprisonment for insanity are contained in a suit for $25,000 damages filed in Common Pleas Court here by Joseph Slater against his son, C. C. Slater, president of the Columbus Railway, Light and Power Co.

The elder Slater declares that his son and Dr. Earl E. Gaver, owner of the Gaver Sanatorium, entered a collusion and deprived him of his liberty, all care, attention, visitation, between June 18 and July 19, 1925.

CINCINNATI, O., June 14.—Boast to a fellow worker that he had killed and robbed a man led to the arrest of Jesse Keith, 41, Negro laborer, and his subsequent confession today that he had slain a man believed to be Robert McDonald, railroad worker, Toledo.

The skull crushed by eight blows of a rivet hammer, McDonald's body was found yesterday in a tool shed.

"I was drunk and we got to arguing. I don't know what about, but he hit me in the jaw," Keith told detectives.

A charge of murder was placed against Keith.

Frank Marzetta, fellow worker of Keith, had reported Keith's statement that he had killed a man, and that he intended to return late to get additional money from the victim's pockets.

Keith denied to police that he had robbed McDonald. In the slain man's pockets was found twenty-three cents, and a time-sheet showing he was to collect a month's pay from the Big Four R. R. in Bellefontaine.

Keith told the detectives that after the slaying he went to his room and remained in a drunken stupor until the following day.

POLICE TO ATTEND GANGSTER FUNERAL

CLEVELAND, O., June 14.—Police will attend the funeral of Sam "Black Jack" Todero, murdered corn sugar merchant, tomorrow, but they will not act as an escort for the cortege, Safety Director Edwin D. Barry reiterated today.

Barry, enraged at private announcements of funeral plans calling for a police escort, also declared that arrangements to have a band and pretentious funeral parade would be opposed under traffic regulations.

Police have been unable to uncover the whereabouts of Angelo Leonardo, 21, son of the murdered "Big Joe" Leonardo who has been indicted for the slaying of Todero, Dominick Suspirato, uncle of the boy, also is missing. He and Mrs. Concetta Leonardo, mother of Angelo, have been indicted for "aiding and abetting" in the murder.

FRENCHMEN CHANGE COURSE; REPORTED HEADED FOR AZORES

Completes Half Of Flight; Weather Is Smiling

NEW YORK, June 14.—The Yellow Bird has changed its course and headed for the Azores or the coast of Portugal because of a shortage of gas, Marius Rollin of the French line steamer Rochambeau notified his offices here by radio today.

Capt. Rollin said he received a message from the plane early today reporting that the fliers feared their fuel would not hold out until they reached France.

Capt. Rollin's message follows: "Have caught a 12:30 a. m. message somewhat blurred from FAX (the Yellow Bird's call letters) saying on account of having used up gasoline heading towards Azores and Portuguese coast."

NEW YORK, June 14.—The French monoplane Yellow Bird, speeding eastward over the Atlantic Ocean toward Paris, early today apparently had completed more than half of its charted route from Old Orchard, Me.

Eighteen hours after the three adventurous French fliers—Armand Lotti, Jean Assolant and Rene Lejeune—had lifted the great plane in a beautiful take off from the sands of Old Orchard the Yellow Bird was believed to have covered something more than 1,800 miles.

Early today the naval radio station at Bar Harbor, Me., reported that the American Farmer had communicated with the Yellow Bird at 11 p. m. E. S. T. yesterday and that at that hour the French fliers reported all was well.

The Yellow Bird at that time was believed to have traveled nearly 1,400 miles, maintaining an average of more than 100 miles an hour.

Previously the United States shipping board steamer Wytheville had reported sighting the Yellow Bird 850 miles east and south of Old Orchard.

As the Yellow Bird continued its flight, aided by weather which was described as "the best since Lindbergh flew to Paris," those ashore who were following its progress were attempting to check the report that a stopover had succeeded in getting aboard the plane before its take-off.

The Old Orchard boys said a youth named Arthur Schreider had secreted himself aboard the ship in the confusion surrounding the start. Aviation experts generally doubted that such a feat was possible.

The Wytheville reported.

POLICE CONTINUE SLOT MACHINE DRIVE

CLEVELAND, June 14.—Notice that police will continue to seize slot machines found within the city limits was served today in a petition on file in Common Pleas Court asking dissolution of a temporary injunction against police.

The petition was filed by Law Director Carl F. Shuler. It asked that Judge George P. Baer dissolve the order restraining police from touching the machines.

Judge Baer said the order would remain in effect until the suit for a permanent injunction, filed by Walter E. Matthias, local representative of slot machine interests, is heard.

Shuler, in his petition, charged the presence of the machines in the city tends to increase crime, said the machines had been proved gambling devices and that police would continue to confiscate them.

BORDER PATROLMAN CLEARED OF MURDER

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The treasury today cleared Customs Border Patrolman Emmet J. White, of culpability in connection with the killing of Henry Yrula, a Big Falls, Minn., confectioneer.

THE FLAT TIRE

A DRAB LITTLE MOTH FLIES TO HAPPINESS

READ THIS FIRST:
Vivian Matthews, doorstep baby, is considered a "flat tire" by the younger set of Bender, Kan., because she is shy and unhappy. Kentworth Hillman Johns III, jilted by Aurelia "Dovie" Jansen and "through with women," offers Vivian one hundred thousand dollars and a divorce in Paris in a year if she will marry him so that he can get the fortune left by his grandfather, in New York, on their platonic honeymoon. Vivian secures a French maid, Celeste, who transforms her with beautiful clothes. In the lobby she attracts the attention of Mann Barkow, famous illustrator, who sends a note and asks to see her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER X
"Oh, gosh, I don't know what to do," Vivian read the note again, and looked to Celeste for more advice.
"Oh, madame," Celeste was impatient. "How you can be so unromantic! Like a cabbage. Mon dieu!"
All Vivian's reserve broke.
"Oh, well, who cares!" She picked up the note and paper to answer the note from Barkow. "At least he is a well known man—and not a total stranger. That makes it different."
Celeste smiled at these American women always making excuses for affairs de coeur. So prosaic! Here was madame, not even loving her own husband on her honeymoon. Hadn't she listened for his step in madame's boudoir every night?
And him down on Long Island this very day, when he should be with her. She kept her thoughts to herself, but something of what she was thinking penetrated to Vivian. She was beginning to be of the same trend of thought. It wasn't fair! She would get something out of life. Other women did!
Barkow telephoned shortly afterward, and they made an appointment to meet in the lounge at seven. It would not be proper for Vivian, she thought, to see him in her apartment with Kent away.
Celeste was highly excited.
"Madame must wear her so prettiest evening dress. And she must be like the queen."
"Oh, no, Celeste," Vivian protested. "I don't want to be conspicuous."
"Madame," the little maid was firm, "why you not take my advice? Celeste know. It is impossible for a woman to look conspicuous to bad taste in beautiful clothes of excellence."
It is so near dinner, everyone will be dress," Celeste assured her, as she waved her hair, patted perfume into it, and slipped a stunning white sequin close fitting slip of a frock over her head. "Madame will not be at all conspicuous."
It was the first time Vivian had ever worn an evening gown. Except when she tried her gowns in the shops and paraded in them in her apartment. She felt strange. But it gave her a beautifully dressed up feeling. She knew she was perfectly groomed. And what a weapon that is!
Oh, yes, Barkow should think she was just dressed for dinner. That would be excuse enough for looking so stunning. He should think she was going to have dinner with her husband—and had just slipped down a moment.
But when she saw Barkow, stunning and immaculate in his evening clothes, waiting for her in the lounge, Vivian did not feel quite so sure of herself. She was suddenly panicky! Oh, was she going to get all tongue tied like she had been all her life when she met people! This was dreadful! She had forgotten entirely, feeling so secure in her lovely apartment and her beautiful clothes, that never in her life had she talked with a handsome stranger. That never before had a man paid her flattering attention.
But Barkow held out his hand with such utter ease—so sure of himself—that Vivian sat down on a divan beside him, at least outwardly controlled and showing no signs of her nerves.
Barkow's eyes took her in with the greedy look of a connoisseur of precious art. Her white velvet evening wrap fell from one shoulder and he saw that her shoulders were exquisitely molded.

What was it about this strange woman that attracted him so? He could have reached out there and taken her in his arms. But he kept the feeling out of his voice.
Vivian saw that his hair was a golden blond, his eyes a warm deep gray, and that he was even more handsome than she had thought him in that fleeting glance she caught of him from the elevator. Not quite so tall. But perhaps she was comparing him with Kent's six feet two.
She found herself attracted toward him as he was toward her. For a moment she stared back at his frank inspection—then flushed. He saw this and tried to cover her confusion.
"An artist, Mrs. Johns," he smiled amiably with an impersonal note in his voice, "has a very hard time trying to find types. It is almost impossible. We just have to talk right up when we do find one—and it is sometimes as difficult for us as for the person we want to paint. Would you object to sitting for me?"
"Well," Vivian studied a moment, "it is hard for me to grasp the idea of you wanting to paint me. I never thought of myself as an artist's model. It is interesting. But I don't see how I can pose for you. My husband and I are going back to Bender day after tomorrow."
"Bender? Bender, Long Island?" Barkow asked her.
"No," she didn't like to tell him, but she would have to. "Bender, Kansas."
"You—you are from a small Kansas town?" Barkow did not try to hide his surprise. "But you have lived abroad, I suppose."
"No, indeed," Vivian laughed suddenly. She was tempted to tell him she had never worn an evening gown before, but stifled the impulse. "I have never even been to New York before a few days ago." Barkow laughed. It was a nice laugh, she thought—and when she joined him he sang under his breath, teasing:
"I'm a wild prairie flower,
Growing wilder hour by hour."
Barkow seemed to be thinking. Suddenly he surprised her almost out of speech when he asked:
"Would you let me paint you if I came to your home town? I've always wanted to spend some time in the Middle West. I could find a great deal of color for my work."
That was too much! Vivian stared at him, open mouthed, for a moment.
"You—goodness, do you mean to say you'd come all the way out there to paint ME?"
"I certainly do," he smilingly assured her. "But—do you think your husband would object?"
"Oh, no," Vivian said it almost too quickly, and knew it immediately. "He wouldn't be interested at all."
Barkow looked at her closely. Ah, here was a mix-up of some kind. As sure as you're born! A neglected wife—and on her honeymoon, too. The manager had told him that. Well, so much the better. No interference.
"You are dining with your husband?" he asked her a little later.
"Er—no, he is with some friends on Long Island," she answered suddenly embarrassed. "My maid and I went shopping today and almost forgot to come home. He had to leave before we got here."
It was a poor excuse and she, knowing it, colored again. Barkow was amused.
"I'd be very happy to have you dine with me, Mrs. Johns," he smiled engagingly. "If your husband wouldn't object."
And, much to her surprise, she heard herself accepting, as though she had been making dinner dates with men all her life.
Celeste was wide-eyed with surprised appreciation when Vivian ran upstairs for a hand bag and make-up and told her she was going to dinner with Barkow.

"Oul, oul," she shrugged her dainty shoulders. "Celeste know madame is a vamp. She do not have to tell." And she prompted her maternally. "Madame must make him take her to ze smart night club and dance."
"Oh, my goodness, Celeste," Vivian almost choked. "I couldn't. Why, I've only danced a couple of times in my life. I wouldn't know a thing about it."
Celeste grabbed her suddenly and danced her around the room, humming a jazz melody under her breath.
"Do not be scared so! Here! Madame is like ze board. Not so stiff!"
Vivian relaxed, and Celeste, laughing, swung her around the room several times.
"I feel it! Madame now dance like Madame Pavlova." She gave her an affectionate little pat. "Madame is not sure of herself. But she is beautiful and charming. She have everything in the world to live for."
Barkow took Vivian to his favorite rendezvous. Where he particularly liked to entertain a beautiful girl. The food was superb and a concealed string orchestra played soulfully. But there was no dancing. She was like a pale waxed lily under the soft lights, her white dress gleaming around her long, white throat.

"I know," he told her softly. "You are like a lily. But your eyes? They belie the lily. Ah, I have it—you are a tiger lily."
Vivian stirred, ill at ease. But it was like a cool drink in the desert. Admiration. It was like soft music, too.

CEMETERY SEEKS TO ABOLISH STREETS

City Commission has under consideration a petition filed Thursday night by the Woodland Cemetery Association, through Judge H. L. Smith, board member, seeking authority to vacate certain streets and alleys in Gatch's Addition.

The cemetery board recently purchased four acres out of the north part of the addition adjoining and immediately south of three and one-third acres of land bought in 1925. In the latter tract the streets and alleys were vacated the same year.

It is pointed out in the petition that the streets and alleys in question have never been opened for public use, that the city has made expenditure of money on them and that it will not be in any way detrimental to the public if they are vacated.

The commission also placed on its first reading the annual street cleaning ordinance.

TRACK REPAIRS NOT TO BLOCK STREETS

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. is engaged in repairing a stretch of its track on the Springfield branch line on Detroit St. from Church St. south three squares to the end of the paving near Third St.

New rails and planks are being laid after which the brick pavement will be re-laid and smoothed over.

The entrance to E. Church St. was blocked for a time but city officials took steps to see that no more streets in the business section are blocked while the repair work is in progress. As a result the right-of-way will be repaired in sections in order that no streets will be entirely blocked.

CAPTURE BANDITS WHO SLEW PRIESTS

HANKOW, China, June 14.—Six bandits, who participated in the massacre of three Passionist fathers several weeks ago, were killed or captured by Hunan troops, the American consul-general here was advised.

The military forces were besieging five more bandits trapped in a stronghold near Huang-Shi-Hihahn Mountain. The leader of the bandits, who shot and killed Father Godfrey Holbein, Baltimore, was slain by soldiers' bullets, the report said.

The other priests slain were Fathers Clement Siebold, Dunkirk, N. Y., and Walter Coveyou, Potosi, Mich.

COOPER FILES APPEAL WITH SUPREME COURT

Gilbert Cooper, Cedarville, convicted of the murder of Caleb Hitchcock last November, carried his fight for freedom to the state supreme court Friday when F. L. Johnson, defense counsel, filed an application to file a petition in error.

The application will not be heard by the supreme court until it convenes again next fall. Cooper was convicted of first degree murder with a recommendation of mercy and was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge R. L. Gowdy. He was accused of killing Hitchcock following an argument over some traps near Cedarville.

The conviction was sustained by the court of appeals and the defendant now hopes to win a reversal from the supreme court.

MURDER THEORY IS SMASHED BY DOCTOR

AKRON, June 14.—The murder theory in the death of Charles Chandler, Stow farmer, collapsed temporarily at least, today after Dr. F. C. Potter of Peoples Hospital declared his examination of the man's vital organs did not show foul play conclusively.

Three suspects held for the last week were to be released from county jail today on their own bonds, according to Assistant Prosecutor George Hargraves. Mrs. Chandler, widow of the dead man, was permitted to return to her home last night after she had been questioned for more than twenty-four hours.

The probe of Chandler's death is not being dropped, Hargraves said. Dr. Potter has been instructed to make further tests of Chandler's vital organs in an effort to determine definitely how he met death.

GRANTED DIVORCE

On grounds of wilful absence Fred C. Kelly, author and journalist, President of the R. A. Kelly Co., Xenia cordage firm, was granted a divorce in Common Pleas Court at Akron, O., Thursday from Florence S. Kelly, of Cleveland. The parties to the divorce agreed to alternate in the custody of their 17-year-old son, Fred, Jr.

DUMP NEAR LIBRARY CLOSED TO PUBLIC

A protest against the dump in the rear of the Greene County District Library was lodged with City Commission Thursday night by a group of ten citizens living in the vicinity, who complained the stench was unbearable. The property owners live on Church St. and in the Dodds Addition.

City Manager S. O. Hale, however, had already ordered the dump closed to public use the previous day and the request of the citizens that a film of dirt be scattered over the inflammable trash in the pit in order that it could not be set on fire, will be complied with, the commission decided.

The dump has been in public use since 1923.

Eight Boys

"I read an ad in the newspaper and I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I will recommend this medicine to any woman who is in bad shape like I was. I used to get so tired after a few hours' work that I was even afraid in my own house in the daytime. I didn't care if I lived or died. I have given birth to eight boys and I feel strong right after, since I have taken the Compound."

CEMETERY SEEKS TO ABOLISH STREETS

City Commission has under consideration a petition filed Thursday night by the Woodland Cemetery Association, through Judge H. L. Smith, board member, seeking authority to vacate certain streets and alleys in Gatch's Addition.

The cemetery board recently purchased four acres out of the north part of the addition adjoining and immediately south of three and one-half acres of land bought in 1922. In the latter tract the streets and alleys were vacated the same year.

It is pointed out in the petition that the streets and alleys in question have never been opened for public use, that the city has made no expenditure of money on them and that it will not be in any way detrimental to the public if they are vacated.

The commission also placed on its first reading the annual street cleaning ordinance.

Track repairs not to block streets

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. is engaged in repairing a stretch of its track on the Springfield branch line on Detroit St. from Church St. south three squares to the end of the paving near Third St.

New rails and planks are being laid after which the brick pavement will be re-laid and smoothed over.

The entrance to E. Church St. was blocked for a time but city officials took steps to see that no more streets in the business section are blocked while the repair work is in progress. As a result the right-of-way will be repaired in sections in order that no streets will be entirely blocked.

CAPTURE BANDITS WHO SLEW PRIESTS

HANKOW, China, June 14.—Six bandits, who participated in the massacre of three Passionist fathers several weeks ago, were killed or captured by Hunan troops, the American consul-general here was advised.

The military forces were besieging five more bandits trapped in a stronghold near Huang-Shi-Hsih Mountain. The leader of the bandits, who shot and killed Father Godfrey Holbein, Baltimore, was slain by soldiers' bullets, the report said.

The other priests slain were Fathers Clement Siebold, Dunkirk, N. Y., and Walter Coveyou, Petoskey, Mich.

COOPER FILES APPEAL WITH SUPREME COURT

Gilbert Cooper, Cedarville, convicted of the murder of Caleb Hitchcock last November, carried his fight for freedom to the state supreme court Friday when F. L. Johnson, defense counsel, filed an application to file a petition in error.

The application will not be heard by the supreme court until it convenes again next fall. Cooper was convicted of first degree murder with a recommendation of mercy by a jury of 12 men and one woman, and was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge R. L. Gowdy. He was accused of killing Hitchcock following an argument over some traps near Cedarville.

The conviction was sustained by the court of appeals and the defendant now hopes to win a reversal from the supreme court.

MURDER THEORY IS SMASHED BY DOCTOR

AKRON, June 14.—The murder theory in the death of Charles Chandler, Stow farmer, collapsed temporarily at least, today after Dr. F. C. Potter of Peoples Hospital declared his examination of the man's vital organs did not show foul play conclusively.

Three suspects held for the last week were to be released from county jail today on their own bonds, according to Assistant Prosecutor George Hargraves.

Mrs. Chandler, widow of the dead man, was permitted to return to her home last night after she had been questioned for more than twenty-four hours.

The probe of Chandler's death is not being dropped, Hargraves said. Dr. Potter has been instructed to make further tests of Chandler's vital organs in an effort to determine definitely how he met death.

GRANTED DIVORCE

On grounds of wilful absence Fred C. Kelly, author and journalist, President of the R. A. Kelly Co., Xenia cordage firm, was granted a divorce in Common Pleas Court at Akron, O., Thursday from Florence S. Kelly, of Cleveland. The parties to the divorce agreed to alternate in the custody of their 17-year-old son, Fred, Jr.

Ollie Freelan has filed suit in Common Pleas Court against O. C. Harner for $10,000 damages, charging that the defendant alienated his wife's affections.

Freelan asserts that in January, 1929 he and his wife, Bessie, were living at 426 E. Market St. and were happily married. He claims that the defendant enticed his wife away to a separate residence maintained by him in Xenia Twp., where he harbored her until May 12, when the plaintiff coaxed his wife to return home.

The plaintiff complains that he notified Harner to cease his attentions to his wife April 28 but that their clandestine association continued.

The defendant put his arm around her in public and has been with her at carnivals and on auto rides, resulting in great humiliation to him, Freelan contends.

Attorney F. W. Dunkle represents the plaintiff.

DUMP NEAR LIBRARY CLOSED TO PUBLIC

A protest against the dump in the rear of the Greene County District Library was lodged with City Commission Thursday night by a group of ten citizens living in the vicinity, who complained the stench was unbearable.

The property owners live on Church St. and in the Dadds Addition.

City Manager S. O. Hale, however, had already ordered the dump closed to public use the previous day and the request of the citizens that a film of dirt be scattered over the inflammable trash in the pit in order that it could not be set on fire, will be complied with, the commission decided.

The dump has been in public use since 1923.

CHERBOURG, France, June 14.—Charles G. Dawes, new United States ambassador to Great Britain, arrived here today with his party aboard the Olympic, enroute to Southampton.

Dawes, who will present his credentials to the king tomorrow and plunge into his duties immediately by conferring with Premier Ramsay MacDonald on Sunday, refused to talk while here.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I read an ad in the newspaper and I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I will recommend this medicine to any woman who is in bad shape like I was. I used to get so tired after a few hours' work that I was even afraid in my own house in the daytime. I didn't care if I lived or died. I have given birth to eight boys and I feel strong right after, since I have taken the Compound."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE THIRD TEST—Again the devil sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and saith, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.—Matthew 4:8, 9, 10.

WORK OF MANY NATIONALITIES

The debate on the national origins clause of the immigration act gave the senate a chance to display its historical erudition. The question before the meeting seems to have been: Who won the revolutionary war? Senator Nye seems to think the Irish did, while the English and Scotch were leading Indian massacres and otherwise trying to hamstring the cause of independence. Therefore the national origins clause, which penalizes the Irish in favor of the English, should be repealed.

The revolutionary war happily is over, at least for most Americans. Who won American independence is of less immediate importance than who is going to preserve it, along with the institutions set up to make it effective. The thirteen colonies that revolted from Great Britain and laid the foundation for the United States of today, were small potatoes compared with their progeny. An empire has sprung from the roots they planted. The conquest of half a continent and the creation of the most powerful nation on the face of the earth today has been the work of many nationalities. They have made the country what it is and they give promise of keeping it as it is.

Within the past few decades other nationalities have crashed our gates by the millions, attracted by the prospect of easy money. They have not toiled to build up a new country. They have discovered no deep rooted political convictions that are likely to make them upholders of American political ideals. They have flocked to our shores garbed mentally and physically in alien raiment.

The real test by which future immigration should be judged is the contribution each nationality is likely to make, as evidenced by its past, to the maintenance and defense of American institutions, as they are and not as newcomers to our shores think they should be.

AN INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE

The Daily Telegraph of London, commenting on the fact that differences in language are at present a barrier to international communications, foresees a time when one or two languages will be understood the world over. The linking up of the great American and foreign powers by telephone and radio has given a strong impetus to this movement.

Once international telephony and radio comes into greater use, through a common language, it will mean a great step forward in promoting understanding and friendliness among the great nations of the world.

MISERY AND COMPANY

It is an old saying that misery loves company. The fact is that company is important in curing misery. Modern science has done much in removing mental diseases from the realm of mystery. A century or so ago insane, queer or eccentric people were in danger of being burned for witchcraft. In modern hospitals for mental diseases—no longer do we call them insane asylums—physicians usually find that each person who is ill believes his case is individual. In getting the patient back to a normal state of mind it is important to keep before him the fact that there are many others in his condition and that corrections and cures have been made. Man's terror is always decreased by company.

GOOD BANKING

The money vultures, called loan sharks for short, are being driven out by the humane and helpful methods of sound banking. There are many small but good banking institutions now which lend money to people of small means at reasonable rates. Recently the methods of money vultures who have been flourishing in Kansas City have been made public. One victim borrowed $30. He paid six dollars a month interest for three years and still owes them $30. Another man borrowed ten dollars. Disreputable "justices" before whom cases were taken always ruled for the loan sharks.

Today nobody with good character and good habits need be driven into the lair of the loan shark. The widely extended service of legitimate banking is one of the most important improvements in modern civilization.

ADVICE TO WOMEN

No honest man feels quite up to the task of giving advice to women—especially club women. Hence it will be safer and sounder to let Mrs. Ann Richardson, associate editor of a woman's magazine, talk for a moment. She seems to have no illusions about the benefits that come from women in politics. She says: "The women took a great part in the last campaign, but it was largely emotional. Two emotional issues drew the women into the campaign: namely, religion and prohibition. Women were excited about these, but not interested in any other issues, except, perhaps, the partisan issue of the tariff. They had been brought up on that and had definite convictions, though they did not know what the tariff meant."

"Fifteen million women who were red-hot over the campaign for three months last year are now subject to over some petty subject as to whether cigarettes are good for women. Do they have time to read and find out what the de-benture plan is?"

"No; they may be no worse than the men on this score, but have the leisure to study these things—they have the organization life and the study programs which could go into these subjects. However, outside of the League of Women Voters no one is doing anything to keep in touch with what she voted for."

NEW ORDER RESTRICTING PORT COURTESIES OUTLINED

By SEYMOUR LOWMAN
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury (Seymour Lowman was born at Chemung, N. Y., Oct. 7, 1868. He was educated at Lowell's Business College, Binghamton, N. Y., later studying law in a law office. He began practicing at Elmira, N. Y. He is president of the Lowman Construction Corporation, the U. S. Cut Flower Company, and the Southern Tier Finance Corporation. He has been largely interested in farming. A member of the New York state assembly one term, he served as state senator from 1918 to 1924 and lieutenant governor the following two years. Since August, 1927, he has been assistant secretary of the treasury.)

It has been found necessary to change the treasury department regulations in connection with the issuance of expedite orders and establish a definite plan in that connection. At the port of New York, in addition to the collector of customs and the assistant collector, it was found that the controller of customs, the surveyor of customs and his 12 deputies were all issuing the so-called immediate attention orders.

Upon the arrival of some ships it was found that as many as one-third of the whole list of passengers were expedited through customs on such orders. This practice was un-American and unfair to other passengers. It also tended to laxity in the examination of the baggage of persons holding the expedite orders.

The retail associations have recently protected vigorously against this practice because it was claimed that the effects of many of the passengers were not thoroughly examined and some escaped without paying their just duties, thereby working an injury to the retail trade.

Henceforth expedite orders will be issued only by the collector of customs or the assistant collector of customs throughout the various ports of the United States; and on his own initiative the collector will only be permitted to issue expedite orders in cases involving imperative emergencies, such as passengers accompanying the body of a deceased relative or friends, a passenger summoned home by news of affliction or disaster.

TWO'S A COMPANY?

HOW TO ACHIEVE BEAUTY

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Acne is one complexion problem that many young people have to fight—and because it is such a prevalent problem and one that causes so much unhappiness, I am going to devote two days' articles to it. Many an inferiority complex of youth is directly traceable to acne, and for this reason, if no others, mothers and other guardians of the young ought to lend every effort to helping their young people to get rid of it.

Acne, commonly known as pimples and blackheads, can be corrected—this is the one encouraging thing about it. And while it is to some extent a disease of the young skin, coming often with adolescence, it does not cure itself. One does not "outgrow" acne. So you must work in every possible way to correct it. It is true that when certain physical conditions which give rise to acne are righted through natural or medical means, the affliction disappears. But don't wait for that to happen of itself. It may never happen unless you make it, and a great deal of unhappiness is caused while you delay.

The sensible correction of acne begins below the skin, in the condition of the blood and general system. If your blood is poisoned through wrong food or faulty elimination, or from any other reason, you cannot expect to have a clear and beautiful skin.

Often acne is due to the presence in the system of poison from diseased tonsils or decayed teeth. For this reason a medical examination should be one of the first steps in any individual campaign against it. If an examination fails to reveal any organic ill, the next thing is to free the system from the possibility of other poisons.

First of all consider your diet. Fat, sweet and starchy food should be almost excluded. Proteins should be indulged in very sparingly, that is, meat, fish and eggs, cheese and nuts. Fried food, pastries, heavy indigestible foods and spices should be definitely excluded. Foods which heat the blood such as chocolate and sweet, rich beverages come in this category. Avoid them carefully; also pickles and condiments.

Eat generously of fruits and coarse, dark breads without butter. Figs, dates, prunes, apricots and raisins are good foods rich in natural sugar which should furnish you with enough of the sweets you crave. And all the fresh raw fruits are good for you generally. Some acne sufferers cannot eat berries, especially strawberries, but you can tell usually what your individual peculiarities in this line are.

Skimmed milk and buttermilk are good taken in moderation. Onions are splendid blood purifiers and cabbage and spinach and all the green vegetables are excellent. Bran added to breakfast cereal or made into breads and muffins is good for the roughage it adds to aid elimination.

Water should be drunk in quantities, at least ten or twelve glasses a day. And you should exercise as much as possible—one hour a day at least—and stay in the open air all you can. Nature, sunlight and fresh air are three of Nature's cures for acne which do much good and should never be despised because they are so easy to have and so inexpensive.

Sleep is another natural aid in the cure of acne. Get plenty of sound, unbroken sleep and relaxation. This is good for the body and good for the nerves. Very often acne is largely what aids in establishing a healthy, normal nerve condition aids in helping it.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Political fortune tellers have stopped predicting a long cabinet career for Secretary of Navy Charles Francis Adams.

What stopped them was the secretary's recent speech in Boston, at a meeting of Massachusetts' G. O. P. clubs, panning about 12 senators, who call themselves Republicans but owe no real allegiance to the Republican party, for embarrassing President Hoover by supporting the debenture clause as part of the farm relief bill.

The congressional consensus is that this speech was at least as bad a break as Senator Simeon D. Fess' letter to a friend, referring to the same dozen of senators as "pseudo Republicans."

Worse!—in some respects.

For one thing, Senator Fess is a senator himself.

A senator can bowl other senators out, and even if they resent it and cuss back, nevertheless it is all in the senatorial family. Senatorially speaking, Secretary Adams is a rank outsider. An outsider's criticisms give offense where an insider's do not—anyway not so much.

Another thing, Senator Fess is not responsible to the administration. He can say what he pleases, whether the White House likes it or not.

Secretary Adams, of course, is a presidential appointee. The assumption is that he speaks for his chief—or, if the latter disapproves of it, he has the power to shut him up to fire him, if he chooses.

Finally, no matter how hot under the collar the whole branches of the government may get with Senator Fess, there is nothing they can do about it.

Re-elected only last fall, with six full senatorial years' politics proof, the Ohio statesman is in a position to make official existence for Secretary Adams almost, if not quite, too miserable to endure. It can find fault with everything he does. It can turn down all his departmental policies that require a congressional oke.

If it does so, naturally the whole thing will react on the White House. In such a situation, could President Hoover afford for very long to retain the cause of it among his closest advisers?

A campaign of this sort is far from impossible. In fact, it is certain that Mr. Hoover already has been urged to discipline Secretary Adams for his Boston utterances, in the hope of placating the senate—but it is no safe bet that the senate can be placated.

The suggestion has appeared in print that the naval secretary has "lost his usefulness."

The threat is as serious as that.

It is not to be forgotten that the present group of Democratic senators, plus one Farmer-Laborite, plus 12 Republicans, whom Secretary Adams panned 96- or 95, to be more exact, since there is one Pennsylvania vacancy.

It will be surprising if the 39 Democrats do not join enthusiastically in any program to play horse with a Republican secretary of the navy, especially as Secretary Adams took a slam at them, too, in his Boston remarks.

Senator Henrik Shipstead, the Farmer-Laborite, can be counted on also.

As for the Republican insurgents—well, they showed no compunctions in helping to pile up a majority against President Hoover on the first debenture vote. Are they likely to be more merciful toward the secretary of the navy?—after he has stroked their fur the wrong way—than they were with the president himself?

The very nub of Senator Fess' and Secretary Adams' foolishness consisted in the probable solidification of the opposition of several senators who, in the main, were pro-administration—even though they are debenture-ites.

A third—LaFollette—was neutral. The rest—Borah, Brookhart, Frazier, Howell, Johnson, McMaster, Norbeck, Nye and Pine—supported the G. O. P. ticket. Borah and Brookhart supported it ardently. Pine never was considered an insurgent at all.

Fess and Adams did their best to make permanent opponents of at least nine senators who, properly, did not belong in that category, insofar as the Hoover regime is concerned.

Roast Ham with Apple Stuffing
Scalloped Potatoes
Carrot and Pea Salad
Marshmallow Pudding Coffee

Today's Recipes
Roast Ham with Apple Stuffing—A fresh ham, two cups start chopped apples, one tablespoon minced onion, one-third cup minced celery, one teaspoon salt, pepper, three tablespoons melted butter, hot water or stock to moisten. Wipe ham with a clean, damp cloth. Rub surface with salt, pepper, and prepared mustard and add the stuffing of bread crumbs, mixed with apples, onion, and celery, salt, pepper, butter, and hot water or stock. Put the meat in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) and roast until tender, allowing 30 minutes per pound. When done, remove extra fat not needed for gravy, add flour in proportion of one tablespoon to one cup of liquid, mix well with fat, add liquid, stir until thickened and season with grated onion.

Carrot and Pea Salad—Marinate one cup of cooked peas and one cup of cooked asparagus tips separately in French dressing for at least an hour. Drain thoroughly. Grate two cups of raw carrot and mix with enough mayonnaise to moisten. Then toss lightly together with the peas and asparagus and one-half cup of blanched, shredded almonds. When ready to serve, arrange on lettuce leaves.

Marshmallow Pudding—Whip the whites of five eggs light, beat into these one-half cup of granulated sugar. Soak one tablespoon of plain granulated gelatin in three tablespoons of cold water. When dissolved fill the cup with boiling water. Add gelatin mixture, a little at a time, to the beaten whites and beat all together 20 minutes. Arrange nutmeats in a ring mold and pour the pudding over them. Place macaroons (or some cake if preferred) on top of the pudding. Set in a cool place and when the pudding is molded turn on to a serving dish. Fill the center with fresh fruit and heap on top as desired whipped cream or ice cream or both.

DIET AND HEALTH

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

"Dear Friend: Last summer I sent for your pamphlet on reducing because I weighed 255 pounds and am only 5 feet 4 inches tall, so you can imagine how I looked. I did not go on the liquid diet, but started right in on my regular dieting, and in eight months I lost 91 pounds and am now down to 164. I know I went too fast, but I had lots of fun! How many calories shall I take to reduce one and one-half pounds a week now until I am normal? I must also mention that I didn't have my monthly period for four years, and went to all sorts of doctors, and they all doctored me for change of life, although I am only 29 years old. So I took the job on my own shoulders with your help, and after a reduction of 38 pounds I started to have my periods every month and feel like a new person. My husband is certainly pleased over the way I look. (Imagine what an eyesore I must have been to him before). When I buy clothes now I am not ashamed of my figure. I also have people telephoning me to find out how I lost my weight. Thank you for what you have done for me."

MRS. W.
I am running your letter to enlighten others who feel that their irregular periods are the cause of their overweight instead—as you have demonstrated—of the result, enlarged glands (generative, thyroid and pituitary) too long, and considered causes of overweight, when in reality they are the victims. You lost approximately three pounds a week, but it didn't hurt you so it was all right for you. The number of calories on which to reduce depends upon your height and physical activities. The taller and more active you are, the more you can have. (I am five feet six inches tall in stocking feet, and get at least two miles of brisk walking each day and 15 to 20 minutes of setting-up exercises; I find I can reduce one pound a week on 1,600 calories. But I don't cheat myself in counting, always giving a dish a good high count if I am in doubt.)

You'll have to work your reducing number out for yourself, Mrs. W. Keep track of your daily number of calories for three or four weeks; average them, and also your losses, and be guided by your findings. You'll have to make this average over three or four weeks, because you cannot judge by one week's figures alone on account of the water balance factor. Some weeks you retain more water than others.

Thank you for letting us know your good results. Let us know when you get down to normal!

Miss A.—No, the removal of the cysts in your ovaries would not affect the one in your breast. That must also be removed, judging from your description. Cancer is not so very usual among the young. However, you had better have your self attended to, for cystic conditions are liable to degenerate to cancer, even among the younger, if they are neglected too long.

LIVING AND LOVING

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

BABE: Leave the boy alone to go with whom he likes, or whom his parents like, in this case.

"MY DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a boy 19 years old and have been going with a girl two years. For the past six weeks she has been going with a girl that is six years her senior. This girl has a very bad name. I have tried every way I can think of to make her stay away from her, but it is impossible. What do you suggest I could do? Please don't tell me to stay away from her because I love her."

"A FRIEND IN NEED."
Such friendships usually wear themselves out. The older girl probably fascinates the younger. The wisest way to break it off is for you to take both of them out, pay a good deal of attention to the older one and make her talk and air her views. Your girl friend may grow jealous or she may decide she doesn't like the other's ideas. Either will break the charm.

PEACHES: The best thing to do is to tell your father and mother. They will probably see that he marries you. And, in the meantime, keep him at a distance.

SORRY JANE: You cannot mend the past, but you can forget the silly things you did in your "youth." You cannot honorably try to take the boy away from the girl he is engaged to now, so why not turn over a new leaf entirely, and get new friends?

UNDECIDED: You say yourself, that you don't know whether or not you love the first boy friend enough to marry him, so why consider it? Finish your school, and until then don't consider marriage, especially with a man of whom your father does not approve. Go with different boys until you have had some experience and know the kind of man with whom you could be happy.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: Will you kindly answer this question: What is a girl to call her mother-in-law, Mrs. So and So or mother?"

"JUST ANXIOUS."
I think it would please her best to call "Mother." It would me, I know, and it is customary. Say Mother So and So if mother alone comes hard.

PETER'S ADVENTURES

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

OLD MAN OF THE MEADOW

Peter, with his father and mother, lived in an old brown farm house and had no brothers nor sisters nor so very near neighbors to play with. Yet seldom was Peter lonely. All the folks of the out-of-doors world were under his spreading branches. The Old Oak knew so much of all that the beasts and birds and the meadow people said to him because the Old Oak Tree whose life he had saved, had given the boy the wonderful gift of understanding.

Peter was fond of the Old Oak Tree and liked nothing better than to sprawl on the ground under its spreading branches. The Old Oak knew so much of all that the beasts and birds and the meadow people said to him because the Old Oak Tree whose life he had saved, had given the boy the wonderful gift of understanding.

lately. "I am so sorry I nearly stepped on you, but I was so tall a moment ago that I didn't see you. I didn't hurt you, did I?"

"Hello, yourself," replied the old man, crossly. "It was as it happened, you didn't hurt me but it wasn't your fault that you didn't—you easily might have. Next time look before you step, will you?" Turning his back squarely upon Peter the cross little old gentleman made as if to hurry off.

"Wait a minute," cried the boy. "Where are you going?" The old man stopped and glanced back at the boy. Then he right about faced and came back towards him. Peter marked the cross old gentleman's queer little hop, skip and jump and said the first thing that came into his head, which was just like Peter.

"You hop like a Grasshopper, Sir!—and yes—I am sure—you are a Grasshopper!"

"I certainly am!" snapped the cross little old gentleman. "At least Grasshopper is one of my names. Some folks call me Old Man of the Meadows—a fine nickname I think it is. I like it. But goodness gracious, me! I can't stand here all day gabbling with you. As it is I believe you have made me late for the concert. Tch, tch! How careless of me to allow you to waste my time. I have a solo this afternoon. I want to be rehearsed—not that I need any practice, of course. I am perfect in my part I assure you!"

"What concert?" asked the astonished Peter.

"The Straightwings' concert, of course," snapped the cross old gentleman. "We give one every sunny day. But really, you must not detain me longer. Come along with me, if you like, but hurry!"

Spreading wide two brown and yellow handed wings, off Mr. Grasshopper flew. Peter ran after him.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE THIRD TEST—Again the devil sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and saith, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.—Matthew 4:8, 9, 10.

WORK OF MANY NATIONALITIES

The debate on the national origins clause of the immigration act gave the senate a chance to display its historical erudition. The question before the meeting seems to have been: Who won the revolutionary war? Senator Nye seems to think the Irish did, while the English and Scotch were leading Indian massacres and otherwise trying to hamstring the cause of independence. Therefore the national origins clause, which penalizes the Irish in favor of the English, should be repealed.

The revolutionary war happily is over, at least for most Americans. Who won American independence is of less immediate importance than who is going to preserve it, along with the institutions set up to make it effective. The thirteen colonies that revolted from Great Britain and laid the foundation for the United States of today, were small potatoes compared with their progeny. An empire has sprung from the rootstock they planted. The conquest of half a continent and the creation of the most powerful nation on the face of the earth today has been the work of many nationalities. They have made the country what it is and they give promise of keeping it as it is.

Within the past few decades other nationalities have crashed our gates by the millions, attracted by the prospect of easy money. They have not toiled to build up a new country. They have discovered no deep rooted political convictions that are likely to make them upholders of American political ideals. They have flocked to our shores garbed mentally and physically in alien raiment.

The real test by which future immigration should be judged is the contribution each nationality is likely to make, as evidenced by its past, to the maintenance and defense of American institutions, as they are and not as newcomers to our shores think they should be.

AN INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE

The Daily Telegraph of London, commenting on the fact that differences in language are at present a barrier to international communications, foresees a time when one or two languages will be understood the world over. The linking up of the great American and foreign powers by telephone and radio has given a strong impetus to this movement.

Once international telephony and radio comes into greater use, through a common language, it will mean a great step forward in promoting understanding and friendliness among the great nations of the world.

MISERY AND COMPANY

It is an old saying that misery loves company. The fact is that company is important in curing misery. Modern science has done much in removing mental diseases from the realm of mystery. A century or so ago insane, queer or eccentric people were in danger of being burned for witchcraft. In modern hospitals for mental diseases no longer do we call them insane asylums; physicians usually find that each person who is ill believes his case is individual. In getting the patient back to a normal state of mind it is important to keep before him the fact that there are many others like his condition and that correction and cures have been made. Man's terror is always decreased by company.

GOOD BANKING

The money vultures, called loan sharks by short, are being driven out by the humane and helpful methods of sound banking. There are many small but good banking institutions now which lend money to people of small means at reasonable rates. Recently the methods of money vultures who have been flourishing in Kansas City have been made public. One victim borrowed $30. He paid six dollars a month interest for three years and still owes them $30. Another man borrowed ten dollars. Disreputable "usurers" before whom cases were taken always ruled for the loan sharks.

Today nobody with good character and good habits need be driven into the lair of the loan shark. The widely extended service of legitimate banking is one of the most important improvements in modern civilization.

ADVICE TO WOMEN

No honest man feels quite up to the task of giving advice to women—especially club women. Hence it will be safer and sounder to let Mrs. Ann Richardson, associate editor of a woman's magazine, talk for a moment. She seems to have no illusions about the benefits that come from women in politics. She says: "The women took a great part in the last campaign, but it was largely emotional. Two emotional issues drew the women into the campaign: namely, religion and prohibition. Women were excited about these, but not interested in any other issues, except, perhaps, the partisan issue of the tariff. They had been brought up on that and had definite convictions, though they did not know what the tariff meant."

"Fifteen million women who were red-hot over the campaign for three months last year are now arguing over some such petty subject as whether cigarettes are good for women. They have time to read and find out what the debenture plan is."

"No; they may be no worse than the men on this score, but have the leisure to study these things—they have the organization life and the study programs which could so into these subjects. However, outside of the League of Women Voters, no one is doing anything to keep in touch with what she voted for."

NEW ORDER RESTRICTING PORT COURTESIES OUTLINED

By SEYMOUR LOWMAN

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury (Seymour Lowman was born at Chemung, N. Y., Oct. 7, 1868. He was educated at Lowell's Business College, Binghamton, N. Y., later studying law in a law office. Admitted to the bar in 1891 he began practicing at Elmira, N. Y. He is president of the Lowman Construction corporation, the U. S. Cut Flower company, and the Southern Tier Finest corporation. He has been largely interested in farming. A member of the New York state assembly one term, he served as state senator from 1913 to 1924 and lieutenant governor the following two years. Since August, 1927, he has been assistant secretary of the treasury.)

It has been found necessary to change the treasury department regulations in connection with the issuance of expedite orders and establish a definite plan in that connection. At the port of New York, in addition to the collector of customs and the assistant collector, it was found that the comptroller of customs, the surveyor of customs and his 12 deputies were all issuing the so-called immediate attention orders.

Upon the arrival of some ships it was found that as many as one-third of the whole list of passengers were expedited through customs on such orders. This practice was un-American and unfair to other passengers. It tended to create in the examination of the baggage of persons holding the expedite orders.

The retail associations have recently protested vigorously against this practice because it was claimed that the effects of many of the passengers were not thoroughly examined and some escaped without paying their just duties, thereby working an injury to the retail trade.

Hereafter, expedite orders will be issued only by the collector of customs or the assistant collector of customs throughout the various ports of the United States; and on his own initiative the collector will only be permitted to issue expedite orders in cases involving imperative emergency, such as passengers accompanying the body of a deceased relative or friends, a passenger summoned home by news of affliction or disaster.

TWO'S A COMPANY?

HOW TO ACHIEVE BEAUTY

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Acne is one complexion problem that many young people have to fight—and because it is such a prevalent problem and one that causes so much unhappiness, I am going to devote two days' articles to it. Many an inferiority complex of youth is directly traceable to acne, and for this reason, if no others, mothers and other guardians of the young ought to lend every effort to helping their young people to get rid of it.

Acne, commonly known as pimples and blackheads, can be corrected—this is the one encouraging thing about it. And while it is to some extent a disease of the young skin, coming often with adolescence, it does not cure itself. One does not "outgrow" acne. So you must work in every possible way to correct it. It is true that when certain physical conditions which give rise to acne are righted through natural or medical means, the affliction disappears. But don't wait for that to happen of itself. It may never happen unless you make it, and a great deal of unhappiness is caused while you delay.

The sensible correction of acne begins below the skin, in the condition of the blood and general system. If your blood is poisoned through wrong food or faulty elimination, or from any other reason, you cannot expect to have a clear and beautiful skin.

Often acne is due to the presence in the system of poison from diseased tonsils or decayed teeth. For this reason a medical examination should be one of the first steps in any individual campaign against it. If an examination fails to reveal any organic ill, the next thing is to free the system from the possibility of other poisons.

First of all consider your diet. Fat, sweet and starchy food should be almost excluded. Proteins should be indulged in very sparingly, that is, meat, fish and eggs, cheese and nuts. Fried food, pastries, heavy indigestible foods and spices should be definitely excluded. Foods which heat the blood such as chocolate and sweet, rich beverages come in this category. Avoid them carefully; also pickles and condiments.

Eat generously of fruits and cereals, dark breads without butter. Figs, dates, prunes, apricots and raisins are good foods rich in natural sugar which should furnish you with enough of the sweets you crave. And all the fresh raw fruits are good for you generally. Some acne sufferers cannot eat berries, especially strawberries, but you can tell usually what your individual peculiarities in this line are.

Skimmed milk and buttermilk are good taken in moderation. Onions are splendid blood purifiers and cabbage and spinach and all the green vegetables are excellent. Bran added to breakfast cereal or made into breads and muffins is good for the roughage it adds to aid elimination.

Water should be drunk in quantities, at least ten or twelve glasses a day. And you should exercise as much as possible—one hour a day at least—and stay in the open air all you can. Water, sunlight and fresh air are three of Nature's cures for acne which do much good and should never be despised because they are so easy to have and so inexpensive.

Sleep is another natural aid in the cure of acne. Get plenty of sound, unbroken sleep and relaxation. This is good for the body and good for the nerves. Very often acne is largely a nervous condition, so that anything which aids in establishing a healthy, normal nerve condition aids in helping it.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Political fortune tellers have stopped predicting a long cabinet career for Secretary of Navy Charles Francis Adams.

What stopped them was the secretary's recent speech in Boston, at a meeting of Massachusetts' G. O. P. clubs, panning about 12 senators, who call themselves Republicans but owe no real allegiance to the Republican party, for embarrassing President Hoover by supporting the debenture clause as part of the farm relief bill.

The congressional consensus is that this speech was at least as bad a break as Senator Simeon D. Fess' letter to a friend, referring to the same dozen of senators as "pseudo Republicans."

Worse!—In some respects.

For one thing, Senator Fess is a senator himself.

A senator can bowl other senators out, and even if they resent it and cut back, nevertheless it is all in the senatorial family. Senatorially speaking, Secretary Adams is a rank outsider. An outsiders' criticisms give offense where an insiders' do not—anyway not so much.

Another thing, Senator Fess is not responsible to the administration. He can say what he pleases, whether the White House likes it or not.

Secretary Adams, of course, is a presidential appointee. The assumption is that he speaks for his chief—or, if the latter disapproves of it, he has the power to shut him up—to fire him, if he chooses.

Finally, no matter how hot under the collar the whole three branches of the government may get with navy, especially as Secretary Adams took a slam at them, too, in his Boston remarks.

Senator Henrik Shipstead, the Farmer-Laborite, can be counted on also.

As for the Republican insurgents—well, they showed no compunctions in helping to pile up a majority against President Hoover on the first debenture vote. Are they likely to be more merciful toward the secretary of the navy?—after he has stroked their fur the wrong way—than they were with the president himself?

The very nub of Senator Fess' and Secretary Adams' foolishness consisted in the probable solidification of the opposition of several senators who, in the main, were pro-administration—even though they are debenture-ites.

A third—LaFollette—was neutral. The rest—Borah, Brookhart, Frazier, Howell, Johnson, McMaster, Norbeck, Nye and Pine—supported the G. O. P. ticket. Borah and Brookhart supported it ardently. Pine never was considered an insurgent at all.

Fess and Adams did their best to make permanent opponents of at least nine senators who, properly, did not belong in that category, insofar as the Hoover regime is concerned.

Roast Ham with Apple Stuffing
Scalloped Potatoes
Carrot and Pea Salad
Marshmallow Pudding Coffee

Today's Recipes

Roast Ham with Apple Stuffing—A fresh ham, two cups tart chopped apples, one tablespoon minced onion, one-third cup minced celery, one tablespoon salt, pepper, three tablespoons melted butter, hot water or stock to moisten. Wipe ham with a clean, damp cloth. Rub surface with salt, pepper, and prepared mustard and add the stuffing of bread crumbs mixed with apples, onion, celery, salt, pepper, butter, and hot water or stock. Put the meat in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) and roast until tender, allowing 30 minutes per pound. When done, remove extra fat not needed for gravy, add flour in proportion of one tablespoon to one cup of liquid, mix well with fat, add liquid, stir until thickened and season with grated onion.

Carrot and Pea Salad—Marinate one cup of cooked peas and one cup of cooked asparagus tips separately in French dressing for at least an hour. Drain thoroughly. Grate two cups of raw carrot and mix with enough mayonnaise to moisten. Then toss lightly together with the peas and asparagus and one-half cup of blanched, shredded almonds. When ready to serve, arrange on lettuce leaves.

Marshmallow Pudding—Whip the whites of five eggs light, beat into these one-half cup of granulated sugar. Soak one cup of gelatin in three tablespoons of cold water. When dissolved fill the cup with boiling water. Add gelatin mixture, a little at a time, to the beaten whites and beat all together 20 minutes. Arrange nutmeats in a ring mold and pour the pudding over the nuts. Place macaroons (or sponge cake if preferred) on top of the pudding. Set in a cool place and when the pudding is molded turn on to a serving dish. Fill the center with fresh fruit and heap on top as desired whipped cream or ice cream or both.

DIET AND HEALTH

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

"Dear Friend: Last summer I sent for your pamphlet on reducing because I weighed 255 pounds and am only 5 feet 4 inches tall, so you can imagine how I looked. I did not go on the liquid diet, but started right in on my regular dieting, and in eight months I lost 91 pounds and am now down to 164. I know I went too fast, but I had lots of fun! How many calories shall I take to reduce one and one-half pounds a week now until I am normal? I must also mention that I didn't have my monthly period for four years, and went to all sorts of doctors, and they all doctored me for change of life, although I am only 29 years old. So I took the job on my own shoulders, with your help, and after a reduction of 38 pounds I started to have my periods every month and feel like a new person. My husband is certainly pleased over the way I look. (Imagine what an eyesore I must have been to him before). When I buy clothes now I am not ashamed of my figure. I also have people telephoning me to find out how I lost my weight. Thank you for what you have done for me."

MRS. W.

I am running your letter to enlighten others who feel that their irregular periods are the cause of their overweight instead as you have demonstrated—of the result. I changed glands (generative, thyroid and pituitary) too long have been considered causes of overweight, when in reality they are the victims. You lost approximately three pounds a week, but it didn't hurt you so it was all right for you.

The number of calories on which to reduce depends upon your height and physical activities. The taller and more active you are, the more you can have. (I am five feet six inches tall in stocking feet, and get at least 50 miles of brisk walking each day and 15 to 20 minutes of setting-up exercises; I find I can reduce one pound a week on 1,600 calories. But I don't cheat myself in counting, always giving a dish a good high count if I am in doubt.)

You'll have to work your reducing number out for yourself. Mrs. W. Keep track of your daily number of calories for three or four weeks; average them, and also your losses, and be guided by your findings. You'll have to make this average over three or four weeks, because you cannot judge by one week's figures alone on account of the water balance factor. Some weeks you retain more water than others.

Thank you for letting us know your good results. Let us know when you get down to normal!

PETER'S ADVENTURES

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

OLD MAN OF THE MEADOW Peter, with his father and mother, lived way out in the country in an old brown farm house and had no brothers nor sisters nor so very near neighbors to play with.

Peter was lonely. All the folks of the out-of-doors world were his friends. What is more, as of course you remember, Peter could talk to the beasts and the birds and the tiny people of the meadow, and could understand all that the beasts and birds and the meadow people said to him because the Old Oak Tree whose life he had saved, had given the boy the wonderful gift of understanding.

Peter was fond of the Old Oak Tree and liked nothing better than to sprawl on the ground under its spreading branches. The Old Oak knew so much. Scarcely a day passed by but what it told Peter a story. Peter decided that it was about time for another tale right now, and started toward his friend. But he hadn't gone far from the front porch of the old farm house when a voice right at his very feet commanded him to stop. And when Peter came to a halt the squeaky voice began to scold him.

"You clumsy fellow! Watch your step, will you? Another second and you would have stepped upon my back and crushed me!"

Peter bent down and looked about in the grass for the speaker, but failed to find anyone or anything that belonged to the voice. Then Peter remembered his magic.

"Watch! Listen!" He spoke the two words the Old Oak Tree had taught him to say when in doubt. In the twinkling of an eye he found himself growing smaller, and smaller and smaller. At last he found himself on a level with and peering into the eyes of an old man with a wrinkled face. Peter was quick to notice, too, that the old fellow wore a gray coat, a pretty green vest, breeches that reached to his knees and long red stockings.

"Hello Sir!" called Peter, politely. "I am so sorry I nearly stepped on you, but I was so tall a moment ago that I didn't see you. I didn't hurt you, did I?"

DOWNTOWNERS BEAT CENTRAL TO GO INTO TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

Once more The Downtown County Club softball team is tied for first place in the National League following its 13 to 7 defeat of Central High School Thursday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field. It was the fifth straight victory for the Downtowners and the sixth consecutive setback for the Bucs.

Central chased over six runs in the first three innings and at the end of the third round held a 6 to 1 lead. However, the D. T. C. Club uncorked a six-run rally in the fourth and went into the lead to stay.

The winners made ten hits against nine for the Bucs. Carr and J. McCurran each hit safely twice for the Downtowners and Weaver and Gibney made two hits apiece for Central.

The contest produced a total of thirteen errors and was also featured by four home runs. Bice and Weaver made consecutive circuit swats for Central in the first inning and Parrett and R. Finlay knocked homers for the winners.

Gibney and Buell collaborated in winning for the Bucs. Frame and McCurran formed the D. T. C. Club battery.

Coates Barber Shop and Rotary Club will play off a postponed American League game Friday night. Score:

PING BODIE IS BIG COFFEE AND GAS MAN NOW

Coffee and gas sales are bringing in the shekles for Ping Bodie, former New York Yankee and one-time slugging pal of Babe Ruth, now that his baseball days are over. At left Ping is shown at his pump and at right with Mrs. Bodie in their coffee shop in San Francisco, Cal. Two of his baseball trophies are against the wall.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

HOW TO BORE A BUSY MAN

Lee S. Gunter, whom I do not know at all, has written a little sketch in the May number of Century Magazine entitled "On Being Bored." He confines his notice to one bore and one form of boredom.

There is a girl who has a hobby on the subjunctive mood, and this young woman bores Mr. Gunter because all her other friends flee away when they see her coming. She must talk so somebody about the subjunctive mood, so this poor man is the goat.

Tush, my dear Gunter, you know nothing at all about being bored! A mere harmless maid with a subjunctive mood hobby can't drive a man mad. She can only annoy him about to the extent that a plague of locusts or a couple of loudspeakers in a bedroom could annoy him.

Now, if the good Gunter had ever been a newspaper editor, a magazine editor, or, in fact any kind of an editor, he would know something about bores in deadly earnest. I used to be bored by a lovely old man, well on toward eighty, who used to come to my office and talk about righteousness. He wasn't trying to convert or convince me. He just wanted to talk to somebody about righteousness. He was a gentle soul, devoid of guile, and I loved him. I couldn't ask him to clear out. Yet I felt sick and sore and baffled every time he used up three hours of my time.

Lady bores have their points. There was one who used to sit by the hour and talk about—what? I just can't think what it was. I never heard her. It was something about Americanism. I believe. She was extremely big and heavy, and my office was narrow. She wouldn't move. I disagreed with her on principle. I asked her to go. But she was impervious to suggestion, and I wasn't big enough to throw her out. She cost me a nervous breakdown.

There was another lady who was an inventor. All inventors are great, I suppose, until they reach the long-drawn-out stage. Then they rush to the nearest editor's office and prepare to fight it out on their own lines if it takes all the time there is.

I'm convinced that being a bore is a disease. Some very nice people have it, and their best friends won't tell them.

The way to avoid becoming a bore is not to shut up like a bale of hay and say nothing at any time. That's the height of boredom. The best way is to consider the other fellow, and talk mostly about what he seems to be interested in.

Wyandot is now put up in packages for home use. It cannot scratch painted or enameled woodwork. It preserves and heightens the gleam and gloss. It makes cloth, sponge or mop speed over the surface as effortlessly as thistle-down in a breeze. It is so easy to use that you can scarcely believe it cleans so thoroughly.

Wyandot contains no caustic soda or harsh abrasives. It can't hurt your hands. Any surface that water won't hurt can't be hurt by water and Wyandot. Try it. Only 15c (covered by money-back guarantee) at your grocer's. Keep this notice as a reminder.

But you shouldn't use that kind of cleanser on painted surfaces. It doesn't pay

HOTELS DO IT RIGHT—USE SPECIAL PRODUCT

Do you know how many dollars a year it is costing you to use "pot-and-pan" cleansers on paint and enamel? Do you know what you're wasting in time and labor, or your home is missing in appearance? Great hotels, hospitals and office buildings could tell you. They're vitally interested in these things. They've used Wyandot exclusively for years.

INTEREST AND SINKING FUND TO LEVY FOR CITY WATER WORKS

The interest and sinking fund and is one of its largest features, amounting annually to more than $15,000.

Despite this expense, the plant had a profit in 1928 of $7,000, which, however, was insufficient to retire the yearly $15,000 bond that became due.

Last year the interest and sinking fund made no levy for the waterworks but provided the necessary money from its surplus. The trustees said they had no similar surplus this year and for that reason a levy of about $8,200 is necessary to help retire the usual bond of $15,000 that will fall due.

Superintendent Zell further pointed out the interest on bonds will become less each year as the bonded debt is reduced and that the profit from the sale of water will consequently increase. A contemplated contract to provide the O. S. and S. O. Home with water will also eventually increase the plant's profit.

About 1926 it is estimated the revenue will have increased to such an extent providing there are no new bond issues, that no tax levy by the interest and sinking fund will be needed to retire the principal on bonds.

It is further pointed out that the small tax levy for the water department made every year to help retire the bonded debt, will decrease year by year. The levy originally amounted to $12,000 but annually has been slightly lower as the plant's profit becomes greater and the interest on bonds becomes less.

George Galloway, president of the interest and sinking fund board, attended the meeting and suggested a slight increase in the water rate instead of the usual annual levy.

It was shown the trustees that the waterworks plant is being operated annually at a profit but that because of the necessity of furnishing about $17,000 worth of free water to the city each year, the revenue from water is not sufficient to retire $15,000 of the plant's bonded indebtedness each year as is required.

T. H. Zell, waterworks superintendent, explained that the department had a net profit of $7,000 last year after payment of operating costs, interest on the bonded debt and providing thousands of dollars worth of water free of charge.

He pointed out that this water could not be furnished free if the plant were privately owned. The interest of the bonded debt is counted in on the operating cost.

DOWNTOWNERS BEAT CENTRAL TO GO INTO TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

Once more The Downtown Country Club softball team is tied for first place in the National League following its 13 to 7 defeat of Central High School Thursday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field. It was the fifth straight victory for the Downtowners and the sixth consecutive setback for the Bucs.

Central chased over six runs in the first three innings and at the end of the third round held a 6 to 1 lead. However, the D. T. C. Club unhooked a six-run rally in the fourth and went into the lead to stay.

The winners made ten hits against nine for the Bucs. Carr and J. McCurran each hit safely twice, for the Downtowners and Weaver and Gibeay made two hits apiece for Central.

The contest produced a total of thirteen errors and was also featured by four home runs. Bice and Weaver made consecutive circuit swats for Central in the first inning and Parrett and R. Finlay knocked homers for the winners.

Gibeay and Buell collaborated in getting for the Bucs. Frame and McCurran formed the D. T. C. Club battery.

There is a girl who has a hobby on the subjective mood, and this young woman bores Mr. Gunter because all her other friends flee away when they see her coming.

She must talk to somebody about the subjective mood, so this poor man is the goat.

Tush, my dear Gunter, you know nothing at all about being bored! A mere harmless maid with a subjective mood hobby can't drive a man mad. She can only annoy him about to the extent that a plague of locusts or a couple of loudspeakers in a bedroom could annoy him.

Now, if the good Gunter had ever been a newspaper editor, a magazine editor, or in fact any kind of an editor, he would know something about bores in deadly earnest. I used to be bored by a lovely old man, well on toward eighty, who used to come to my office and talk about righteousness.

That was his hobby. He wasn't trying to convert or convince me. He just wanted to talk to somebody about righteousness. He was a gentle soul, devoid of guile, and I loved him. I couldn't ask him to clear out. Yet I felt sick and sore and baffled every time he used up three hours of my time.

Lady bores have their points. There was one who used to sit by the hour and talk about—what? I just can't think what it was. I never heard her. It was something about Americanism, I believe. She was extremely big and heavy, and my office was narrow. She wouldn't move. I disagreed with her on principle. I asked her to go. But she was impervious to suggestion, and I wasn't big enough to throw her out. She cost me a nervous breakdown.

There was another lady who was an inventor. All inventors are great, I suppose, until they reach the laqueous stage. Then they rush to the nearest editor's office and prepare to fight it out on their own lines if it takes all the time there is.

I'm convinced that being a bore is a disease. Some very nice people have it, and their best friends won't tell them.

The way to avoid becoming a bore is not to shut up like a bale of hay and say nothing at any time. That's the height of boredom. The best way is to consider the other fellow, and talk mostly about what he seems to be interested in.

INTEREST AND SINKING FUND TO LEVY FOR CITY WATER WORKS

The interest and sinking fund trustees agreed to a tax levy of six cents per $1,000 property valuation for the municipal waterworks department for 1930 when City Commission stood firm Thursday night against a proposal that the water rate be slightly increased and the annual levy be discontinued.

Commission took the position that to raise the water rate would not be fair and equitable to the public inasmuch as the plant provides free water for fire protection of non-consumers as well as consumers and that the annual small tax levy must be made because the law requires a municipal plant to provide a certain amount of free water.

George Galloway, president of the interest and sinking fund board, attended the meeting and suggested a slight increase in the water rate instead of the usual annual levy.

It was shown the trustees that the waterworks plant is being operated annually at a profit but that because of the necessity of furnishing about $17,000 worth of free water to the city each year, the revenue from water is not sufficient to retire $15,000 of the plant's bonded indebtedness each year as is required.

T. H. Zell, waterworks superintendent, explained that the department had a net profit of $7,000 last year after payment of operating costs, interest on the bonded debt and providing thousands of dollars worth of water free of charge.

He pointed out that this water could not be furnished free if the plant were privately owned. The interest of the bonded debt is counted in on the operating cost.

and is one of its largest features, amounting annually to more than $15,000.

Despite this expense, the plant had a profit in 1928 of about $7,000, which, however, was insufficient to retire the yearly $15,000 bond that became due.

Last year the interest and sinking fund made no levy for the waterworks but provided the necessary money from its surplus. The trustees said they had no similar surplus this year and for that reason a levy of about $8,200 is necessary to help retire the usual bond of $15,000 that will fall due.

Superintendent Zell further pointed out the interest on bonds will become less each year as the bonded debt is reduced and that the profit from the sale of water will consequently increase. A contemplated contract to provide the O. S. and S. O. Home with water will also eventually increase the plant's profit.

About 1936 it is estimated the revenue will have increased to such an extent providing there are no new bond issues, that no tax levy by the interest and sinking fund will be needed to retire the principal on bonds.

It is further pointed out that the small tax levy for the water department made every year to help retire the bonded debt, will decrease year by year. The levy originally amounted to $12,000 but annually has been slightly lower as the plant's profit becomes greater and the interest on bonds becomes less.

REV. JAMES QUINN, FORMERLY OF XENIA, OBSERVES JUBILEE

The Rev. James E. Quinn, pastor of St. Charles Borromeo Church at South Charleston and former pastor of St. Brigid Church, Xenia, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood with a silver jubilee program at the church Thursday.

The Rev. Father Quinn celebrated his first mass twenty-five years ago in Holy Trinity Church, Middletown, when Rt. Rev. Monsignor Daniel A. Buckley, pastor of St. Raphael Church, Springfield, was pastor of the Middletown Church.

For six years the Rev. Father Quinn was assistant pastor of St. Raphael Church and he was for several years pastor of the Xenia church, giving up the pastorate here because of ill health. He was succeeded here by the Rev. Albert A. Burke, now of Cincinnati. The jubilee celebration began with a solemn high mass at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning, with the Rev. Father Quinn as celebrant.

The Rev. Joseph Hyland, Eaton, was deacon, the Rev. Edward Casey, Urbana, former pastor of St. Charles Borromeo, was sub-deacon and the Rev. Edward Quinn of Cincinnati, was master of ceremonies. The Rev. Frank Varley, Dayton, arranged a special musical program for the occasion, the choir of St. Joseph Church, Dayton, participating with Joseph Fehring at the organ. Schubert's Mass was sung.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Buckley, vicar general of the Cincinnati archdiocese, delivered the jubilee sermon. A reception in the rectory was held Thursday evening at 8 o'clock when the speakers were Rt. Rev. Monsignor Buckley, Prof. Sharp of Springfield; Rev. Father Casey of Urbana; the Rev. John Sailer, Dayton; the Rev. Joseph M. Hyland, of Eaton. Music was furnished by the St. Raphael Band and Harry O'Brien's Orchestra of Springfield and the Laub Brothers Quartet.

The Rev. David Powers, pastor of St. Brigid Church, was among visiting priests who attended the jubilee.

You don't eliminate carbon by silencing a carbon knock

Of course, a carbon knock can be completely muffled by the use of special motor fuels. But concealing a danger signal never removes the danger.

The danger of carbon is not the knock, but pitted valves and "frozen" piston rings with resulting loss of power. Then, too, carbon forms on the underside of the piston head. When this carbon is hard and flinty, as is usually the case, it chips off in tiny, gritty particles which drop into the crankcase oil.

Thousands of motorists have learned that it is far better to check carbon than to silence the knock. They have discovered that one oil—Shell Motor Oil—stops carbon before it starts.

As a consequence, these regular users of Shell Motor Oil report a marked reduction in carbon removal jobs. This is so because Shell Motor Oil forms only a negligible amount of carbon. Laboratory tests show it, and experience proves it true.

And the little carbon which forms in a motor lubricated by Shell Motor Oil is soft, fluffy and non-fouling... does not bake on metal surfaces, but actually blows away with the exhaust gases. This is especially important in the modern high-compression engine with its small combustion chambers.

In addition to a low carbon content of a harmless, fluffy nature, Shell Motor Oil has ideal body at all operating temperatures and a low pour point to help make starting easy in cold weather.

This combination of all the essentials of complete and proper lubrication is due to two things: the selection of the crude which forms the base of Shell Motor Oil, and the refining process which prepares this crude for use.

Shell crude comes from hand-picked wells. It is refined by the new Shell-developed, low-temperature process... never scorched, never weakened by the high temperatures of ordinary refinery practice. Before Shell Motor Oil is shipped, it must pass 259 tests in order to check and certify the rich, unvarying quality of every quart.

STOP AT THE SIGN OF THE SHELL

—And let the Shell Lubrication Chart be your guide. You'll find courteous salesmen at the familiar yellow and red service stations. Convenient everywhere.

To the man who drives a high-compression engine—we say:
"Try Shell for 30 days"

Even a thin layer of carbon must not be allowed to accumulate in the small combustion chambers of a high-compression engine. The small amount and the non-fouling character of the carbon in Shell Motor Oil make Shell ideal for these new-type cars.

400 "Extra Dry" Shell Gasoline is an honest, clean-burning, hard-hitting motor fuel that is extra quality without extra price.

DANISH TRAINING SHIP, OVERDUE, GIVEN UP AS LOST

Eighty-two days overdue at Melbourne, Australia, on a voyage from Buenos Aires, the big Danish training ship, Kobenhavn, has been given up for lost and her crew of 50 and cadet complement of another 50 student officers regarded as victims of a mysterious fate at sea. The five-masted bark left Buenos Aires five months ago for a two months journey to Melbourne and no word from her has been heard despite the fact that she is equipped with a powerful radio set.

Swedish Fliers Safe Though Forced Down

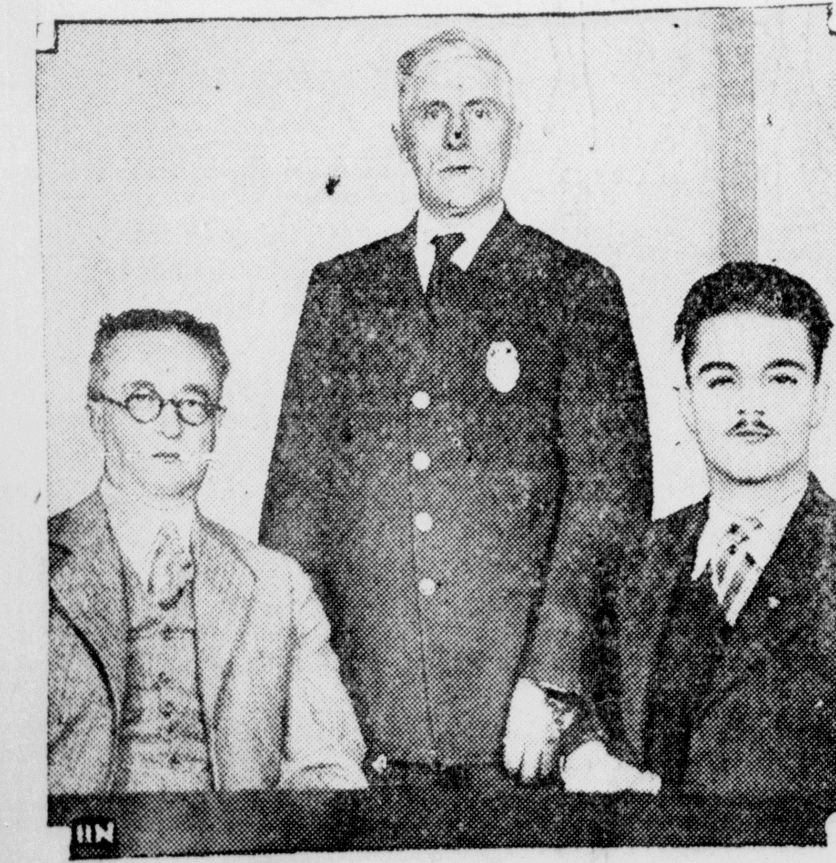

The map, right, shows the proposed route of Robert Ljunglund, left, Captain Ahrenberg, center, and Axel Floden, right, Swedish fliers, attempting to fly to New York in the giant "Sveerige," above. They are reported forced down by motor trouble at Skaptaros on the south coast of Iceland, marked with cross. The flight will continue when repairs are made.

ELEVATOR SAVES GOLFERS' STEPS

Golfers at the Kirtland Country club, near Cleveland, need no longer tire themselves climbing a sharp rise on the green—an elevator has been provided for their comfort. It is believed to be the first of its kind ever used on a golf course. Above a party of players are about to make the ascent.

Torch Slayer Pleads Not Guilty

Showing the effects of his short time in jail, Earl Peacock, left, confessed torch slayer of his wife, Dorothy, appears with his attorney, Sydney Syme, at the White Plains court where he pleaded not guilty on the indictment charging him with murder. He will go to trial on June 24, which happens to be his birthday.

Three Sides to This Story

Nation-wide interest in the action of the Federal Reserve Board in its efforts to suppress speculation in Wall Street is bringing to light a three-cornered fight between Senator Glass of Virginia, upper left; Senator Couzens of Michigan, upper right, and William C. Durant, below. Durant, tremendously interested in Wall Street financially, protests against the action of the Reserve Board in tightening the credit situation to curb speculation, while Glass and Couzens believe the board is right in taking whatever action they see fit and should not be bound by the selfish reasons of financiers and gamblers.

Premier to Visit President Hoover

Prime Minister Ramsey MacDonald, right, Britain's Labor Premier, lacks only a cordial invitation from President Herbert Hoover, below, to bring him sailing over the sea to exchange ideas on reduction of naval armaments, according to a London daily. MacDonald would like to have Mackenzie King, left, Premier of Canada, with him at the meeting.

PASS FROM OFFICIAL CIRCLE

The retirement of Dr. Hubert Work, upper left, as chairman of the Republican national committee, marks the passing of an important trio from President Hoover's political "family." The other two are Colonel William J. Donovan, lower left, and Mabel Walker Willebrandt. They all were high lights in the pre-election campaign.

In Hammer Slaying

George Britton, below, has been held for the murder of Mrs. Carolina Britton, above, his wife, in her home at Methuen, Mass. Police say she was hammered to death and her bed then set on fire after kerosene had been poured over her body and bed.

Bishop vs. Raskob

Rule of John J. Raskob, above, as chairman of the Democratic national committee, is being menaced by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., below, of Virginia, of Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Latest Film Bride

You just can't keep up with these movie people with their marriages. Carmel Myers getting tied with Ralph Blum, an attorney, is the latest of the Hollywood crop. Maybe it's a good idea Carmel having a lawyer in the family.

SOCIETY DISPLAYS PIRATE SUIT

Refuses to Honor and Obey

Despite her husband's efforts to cure her of her love for track athletics, and his consequent ban on her track activities, Mrs. Beach Van Huse Warren, the former Helen Filkey, a prominent Olympic hurdler, "chooses to run" again, and is shown here at Chicago, Ill., taking a hurdle in her practice to compete in the national track meet which will be held there during the month of July.

Once Condemned, in Toils Again

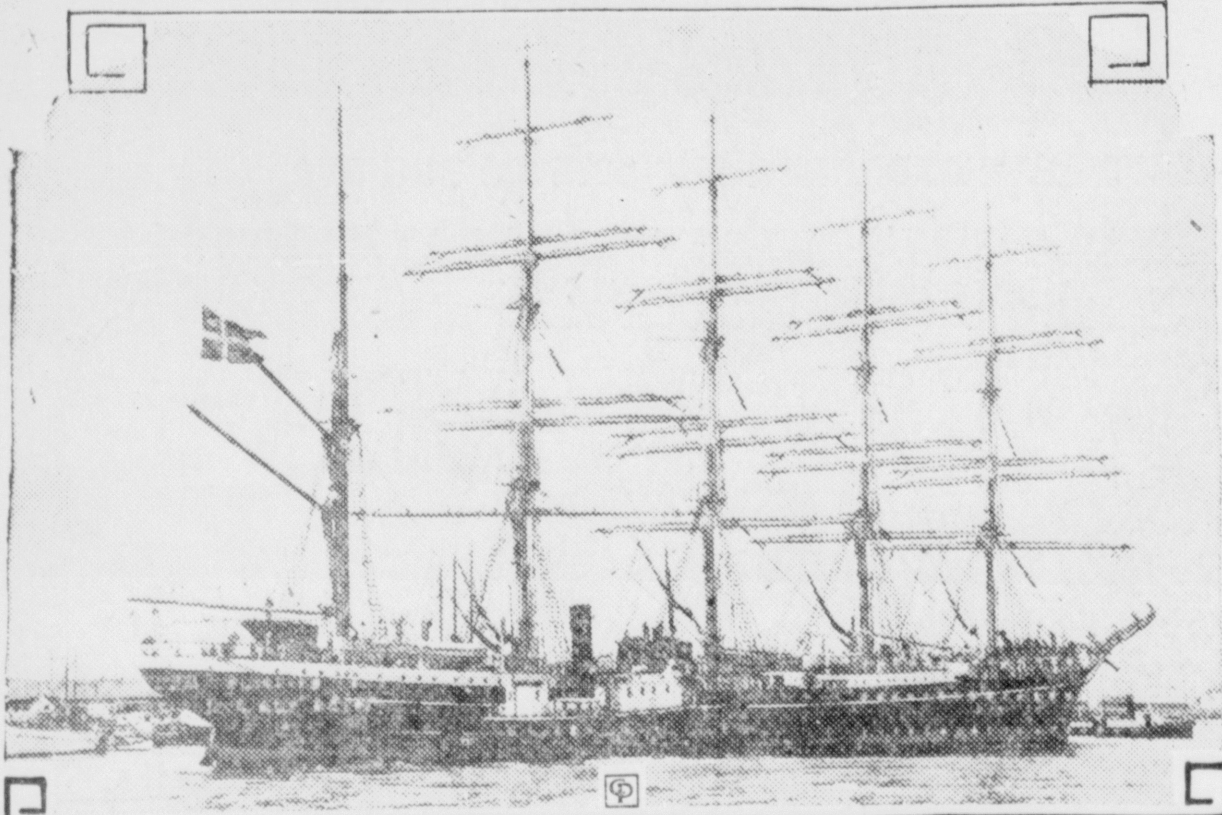

Having once escaped from the shadow of the gallows after being convicted of the murder of Arthur Lindstrom in Chicago several years ago, Mrs. Catherine Cassler, left, of Valparaiso, Ind., is back in jail, where she faces charges of murdering Miss Cameleo Soutar, right, whose body was found in a swamp near Hebron, Ind. Chester Johnson, inset, sweetheart of Miss Soutar, is the woman's chief accuser. Her husband has admitted to having lived with the dead girl during his wife's imprisonment, and she is claimed to have made threats against both.

Alimony After Death

Whether alimony ordered paid by a husband to his divorced wife must be continued after the man's death will furnish the basis for a test suit against the estate of the late Theodore Roberts, film actor, filed by Mrs. Lucy C. Roberts, of Hollywood. They were divorced in 1915, after being married 30 years, and he re-married. She asks $100 a month during her lifetime.

The Church Invites You

MAKING RELIGION PRACTICAL

Professor Hrone says, "Religion is primarily what the man is, what he feels in the presence of the Supreme Being, and then, what he thinks and does in consequence of such feeling."

"The translation of feelings inspired by the presence of divinity into thought is theology, the science of religion; and into volition is the daily need and ceremonial usage that constitute the practice of religion."

The church service of worship is designed primarily to make the presence of the Supreme Being real. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

"CLEANLINESS IS NEXT TO GODLINESS"

When You Want Things Clean---Phone 13

Spurgeon called this psalm

"Man's reply to the benediction of his God; his Song on the Mount, answering to his Redeemer's Sermon on the Mount." John Ruskin committed it to memory when a boy and he counted it the most precious of his brain furnishings. It is the outpouring of a full heart in thanksgiving to Jehovah for his grace and compassion.

V. 1. "Bless Jehovah, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name." One's soul is one's self. "All that is within me" includes all my powers both of inward feelings and outward expressions.

V. 2. "Bless Jehovah, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." The good things of life are so abundant and constant that we lose the sense of their presence.

V. 3. "Who forgiveth all thine iniquities?" Forgiveness is the chief of God's benefits; forgiveness is the gateway to spiritual health which makes for eternal life.

V. 4. "Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies." God provides a ransom from sin and offers a crown woven out of kindness and tender mercies.

V. 5. "Who satisfieth thy desire with good things, so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle." All our reasonable desires are satisfied; this satisfaction is related to forming a new soul life; it is also related to sanctification of heart purity.

V. 6. "Jehovah executeth righteous acts and judgments for all that are oppressed." "Judgments" here means vindications—a restoration from an oppressed life to a life of happiness. Never mind if you do not get a square deal here—God will make it right in the end. He will take care of the oppressor.

V. 7. "Jehovah is merciful and gracious, slow to anger and abundant in loving kindness." God is not to be regarded as incapable because of his love to make necessary correction. He is very slow to punish but when it is absolutely necessary he will administer punishment.

V. 8. "He will not always chide; neither will he keep his anger forever." God's patience must not be presumed upon. Righteous judgment with a penalty is consistent with divine love.

V. 10. "He hath not dealt with us after our iniquities." If God had dealt with us according to our sins we would be suffering punishment continually.

V. 11. "For as the heavens are high above the earth, so great is his loving kindness toward them that fear him." So great is God's kindness that there is nothing with which it can be compared. His forgiveness is also immeasurable. "As far as the east is from the west."

V. 12. "Like as a father pitieth his children, so Jehovah pitieth them that fear him." Human fatherhood at its best is only a suggestion of the fatherhood of God.

1. Why do we so easily forget God's benefits?

2. How can one be really thankful in times of loss and sorrow?

3. What are the things for which we should be most thankful?

4. When and for what was Jesus thankful?

5. How does God prevent our getting old? How overcome "the blues"?

6. What reason for personal gratitude does the Psalmist give?

Clericus says, "Ingratitude is everywhere a base state of the soul, but thankfulness is a fine virtue, grateful to others and promoting the health and happiness of ourselves. Praise is a dominant element in the worship of God. To worship God well one must learn to be continually praising God."

Lesson Prayer, "When at our best, we desire God's benefits, we are quick to praise him, we enjoy service well pleasing to Him. Inspire us to be at our best every moment and never lag in religious and moral interests."

"LABELS AND LIBELS" by Dean Inge, Harper and Brothers, presents scholarly, sometimes witty discussions of such subjects as The Mid-Day Demon, Liberalism, Conservatism, Socialism, Education in A. D. 2000, The Great Powers in A. D. 2000, The Future of Marriage and the Failure of Democracy.

"FINDING MY PLACE" by Moxey, The Abingdon Press, is written for the purpose of leading young girls to discover themselves.

to study possible vocations and the best ways and means of making a success.

WHAT IS THE MODERN TREND OF CHURCHES TO PUBLICITY? At a recent meeting of representatives of twenty denominations, the following resolution was adopted: "We recognize with great satisfaction the increasing adoption by local churches of well-thought-out programs of publicity and advertising, supported by an item in the church budget. We believe that such publicity should be used not only as a means of announcing certain activities but as an evangelistic and educational agency for reaching those now outside all the churches with some message concerning Christ and the church. We believe also that care should be exercised to see to it that all publicity methods are in keeping with the inner meaning and true spirit of Christianity."

Dickason, vice-president of Cedarville College, scheduled for 6:30 p. m., was not held.

Dr. Melvin G. Kyle, former Xenian, now president of the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary at St. Louis, Mo., gave the main address at the morning session Thursday, speaking on the subject, "Archaeology and the Scripture."

Those attending the evening session also heard a solo sung by Prof. John Orr Stewart, head of the department of music at East Kentucky Normal, Richmond, Ky.

Music during the day was in charge of Peter Quartel, Dayton, evangelistic chorister assisted by Kenneth Randolph at the piano.

Friday was designated as "Extending the Kingdom Day" and the high spot of the conference is expected to be reached Friday evening when addresses are scheduled to be made by two outstanding leaders of religious thought.

Dr. Donald McKenzie, who occupies the chair of Systematic Theology in the Western Seminary, Pittsburgh, Pa., will be the speaker at 7:45 o'clock, and will be followed by Dr. A. Gordon MacLennan of the John W. Wainwright Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa., a leader of the conservative forces of the denomination, whose subject will be: "The Climax of Massing Forces." Dr. McKenzie is a liberal leader.

"Young People's Day" will be observed Saturday and the morning and afternoon programs will be as follows:

Saturday Morning

9:30—Service of devotion and song.

10:00—"The Origin and Antiquity of Man"—Dr. Melvin G. Kyle.

10:45—"Is the Bible True?"—Dr. J. H. Spencer.

Saturday Afternoon

1:30—Musical period.

2:00—"Crusading With Christ."—Rev. Thomas F. Campbell.

2:45—"Young People's Conference—State Secretary H. A. Klair and State C. E. President Rev. Thomas F. McCampbell.

"The Dangers of Compromise"—Dr. C. E. Houk.

6:30—Vesper Service. "I'll Go With Him, All the Way." Rev. Campbell.

The conference is attracting widespread attention. The little village of Cedarville has been elaborately decorated with flags and has taken on a holiday atmosphere.

GREEN IS HONORED

COSHOCTON, June 14.—Harry Green, son of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, delivered the valedictory address at the graduating class of Coshocton High School. In achieving the post of valedictorian, he brought back to his family an honor won in 1923 by his sister, Clara Green.

through the U. S. S. Tampa, that the Yellow Bird soared overhead at 5:40 p. m. E. S. T. yesterday, flying swiftly eastward and in no apparent trouble. Weather conditions were extremely favorable and a slight westerly wind was helping the plane's single motor in pushing the ship toward its goal.

The Yellow Bird was expected at Le Bourget Field late this afternoon.

The French aviators had expected to participate in a friendly race across the Atlantic with the American monoplane Green Flash and had no way of knowing that the Green Flash was wrecked on the Old Orchard beach during its attempted take-off.

The Yellow Bird was the first of the two planes to start along the Old Orchard runway. After speeding along the sands for more than a mile the great French craft lifted itself slowly into the air at 9:10 E. S. T., and headed toward the sea. A coast guard plane accompanied it until outdistanced by the faster French ship.

Aboard the Yellow Bird was sufficient for thirty-five hours of flight although Lotti, commander of the flight, said he expected to reach Paris in twenty-eight hours. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's time for the crossing was thirty-three and one-half hours, but he traveled a greater distance, having left from New York.

The course of the flight as finally approved by the Frenchmen was to fly to the east toward the steamship lane "turning" and then to take the ship lanes on a more northerly course, heading directly toward the French coast, instead of taking the route over Ireland as was done by Lindbergh.

The Yellow Bird flew in an easterly direction, and slightly to the south, upon leaving Old Orchard.

It kept this course for a distance of approximately 850 miles, passing the American steamer Wytheville, which was enroute to New York. After keeping on this course for about 100 miles after being sighted by the steamer, the Yellow Bird swung almost sharply to the north and headed directly toward the French coast.

The aviators decided before leaving Old Orchard that when they struck the coast they would make for the mouth of the Loire.

If the weather proved to be bad along the north Atlantic they planned to swing as far southward as the Azores and make for the French coast from there.

If the Yellow Bird maintained the speed which was indicated by Captain Culver of the Wytheville the aviators had only seven hours of night flying left; daylight should have found them within 1200 miles of France and about 700 miles west of the Spanish coast. And as this area usually is thick with ships, passenger vessels as well as freighters, the aviators were considered in greater safety after daylight greeted them.

While her husband sat at the controls of the plane somewhere over the Atlantic, Mrs. Jean Swigart, four-day bride of the young Frenchman, today waited quietly at Old Orchard for some news of the plane. She said she will remain there until definite word of the fliers had been received.

"It was all so sudden," she said. "It is hard for me and it is hard for Jean. We have been together only three days."

"It was all so sudden," she said. "It is hard for me and it is hard for Jean. We have been together only three days."

The Theater

Believing "there's too much dirt and nakedness" in present-day revues and that the tired business man is weary of gazing on nudity on the stage, Flo Ziegfeld, original glorifier of the American girl, intends to abandon revues and may suspend his famous "Follies."

"The revues of late are nothing more than dramatized dirty stories which, in preprohibition days, found their origin in bawoons. In theatrical parlance we call them 'blackouts.'

"That is why I consider it a disgrace to be associated with a revue producer at the present. Un-

"Music Box" and Earl Carroll is having difficulty in attempting a come-back and may suspend his "Vanities." The revue is only a glorified vaudeville show and the public is getting fed up.

less the 'Follies' can be distinguished from the current conception of the revue, I shall abandon them as I have the revue."

Ziegfeld says the next and possibly the last "Follies" will be played only in New York and a moviehouse will be made of the show for showing in cities where the actual "Follies" have never appeared. While he praised the modern chorus girl, Ziegfeld deplored beauty contests and girls who enter them.

"The chorus girl type has improved," he said. "They are better educated, come from good families and have far better ability than their predecessors. They do things these days.

"The respectable American girl will not parade in beauty contests. I do not believe in beauty contests because the contestants are not representative of the typical American girl. Such contests do their greatest harm in misleading the girls chosen for their beauty. The poor girl is exploited, and when she finally realizes she is not so handsome she experiences a terrible comedown, which often causes her to lose her perspective. Beauty contests are the greatest detriment to the youth and beauty of America."

All of this is interesting because Ziegfeld has never been a "dirty" producer. He has never exploited filth, or stressed the risqué in his shows. If he thinks nudity has gone too far he must be right. His theory about the passing of the revue is probably prophetic. The revue is losing its appeal because the old fashioned musical comedy is coming back. Such shows as "Good News" and others with a thin plot turning through them, and remarkably clean for their day and age, have been proving popular while the big revues have dropped their road trips or have disappeared altogether. Judge Gives Methods Necessary To Curb Modern Youth.

By ROY J. GIBBONS
Central Press Staff Writer
CHICAGO, June 14.—Back to parental discipline—the rod, if necessary—that's the way to puncture the whoop in modern youth's inflated idea of life, according to Judge Francis B. Allegretti, of Chicago, who in the last two and one-half years on the bench has passed on the cases of 20,000 boys between the ages of seventeen and twenty-one.

"Boys aren't any worse today than they were in the past," Judge Allegretti declared. "I'd hate to think God was short-changing this generation and I know He's not."

Many Temptations
"The trouble is boys are confronted with more temptations now than before. There's the automobile, the hip flask, the airplane, the movie with its elongated kissing scenes. They all have a bearing on the morals of the times."

"In the last analysis, of course, all goodness or badness in youth has its foundation in their environment. That's the starting point from which any remedial measures must begin. If a boy's home isn't what it should be, there's little or no use of the state

Judge F.B. ALLEGRETTI

"I'd hate to think God was short-changing this generation and I know He's not," Judge Allegretti.

come this secrecy, parents need to be particularly close to their children.

"Especially is it necessary to watch their own conduct, for children copy the manners and conduct of their parents to a marked degree. Parents have a responsibility when they bring children into the world, and they should be guided not alone by their own happiness, but with an eye to the future good of their offspring."

"Separation and divorce of mothers and fathers is one of the commonest basic reasons for boys going wrong. In the years I have been on the bench, it has been my experience that 75 per cent of the boys coming before me were from homes where the parents were either living apart, divorced, or where the mother was a widow or the father a widower."

The Golden Rule is still a good one to follow, Judge Allegretti believes.

Diet Important
And, he counsels, don't forget that what a child eats plays a big part, also, in what he will be. The boy or girl's diet should be regulated, he believes, just as his manners and morality are regulated, and in this he recommends the advice of a competent physician.

"No matter how virtuous and good a soul may be, it's hard for it to function in a crippled or distorted body," he said.

"I don't believe that a boy may inherit a criminal mind, but I certainly am sure he may inherit a susceptibility of criminality. Criminal tendencies in boys, however, can be controlled by training, but we must guard the weak spots and keep continually on watch."

Spare the rod if you can, but if you can't, buy a new hairbrush.

CHILD INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION

Joan, three-year-old daughter of Sewell Nevitt, E. Main St., linotype operator for The Gazette, was bruised on the head but not seriously hurt when an auto driven by Nevitt crashed into a car parked on the west side of N. The baby was slightly hurt when the impact hurled it under the steering wheel.

James William Thorp, 83, inmate of the Greene County Infirmary for the past seventeen years, died there Thursday. He was born September 17, 1845. Funeral services will be held at the infirmary chapel Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with burial in Woodland Cemetery.

DON'T SPARE THE ROD!

Judge Gives Methods Necessary To Curb Modern Youth.

By ROY J. GIBBONS
Central Press Staff Writer
CHICAGO, June 14.—Back to parental discipline—the rod, if necessary—that's the way to puncture the whoop in modern youth's inflated idea of life, according to Judge Francis B. Allegretti, of Chicago, who in the last two and one-half years on the bench has passed on the cases of 20,000 boys between the ages of seventeen and twenty-one.

"Boys aren't any worse today than they were in the past," Judge Allegretti declared. "I'd hate to think God was short-changing this generation and I know He's not."

Many Temptations
"The trouble is boys are confronted with more temptations now than before. There's the automobile, the hip flask, the airplane, the movie with its elongated kissing scenes. They all have a bearing on the morals of the times."

"In the last analysis, of course, all goodness or badness in youth has its foundation in their environment. That's the starting point from which any remedial measures must begin. If a boy's home isn't what it should be, there's little or no use of the state

Judge F.B. ALLEGRETTI

"I'd hate to think God was short-changing this generation and I know He's not," Judge Allegretti.

come this secrecy, parents need to be particularly close to their children.

"Especially is it necessary to watch their own conduct, for children copy the manners and conduct of their parents to a marked degree. Parents have a responsibility when they bring children into the world, and they should be guided not alone by their own happiness, but with an eye to the future good of their offspring."

"Separation and divorce of mothers and fathers is one of the commonest basic reasons for boys going wrong. In the years I have been on the bench, it has been my experience that 75 per cent of the boys coming before me were from homes where the parents were either living apart, divorced, or where the mother was a widow or the father a widower."

The Golden Rule is still a good one to follow, Judge Allegretti believes.

Diet Important
And, he counsels, don't forget that what a child eats plays a big part, also, in what he will be. The boy or girl's diet should be regulated, he believes, just as his manners and morality are regulated, and in this he recommends the advice of a competent physician.

"No matter how virtuous and good a soul may be, it's hard for it to function in a crippled or distorted body," he said.

"I don't believe that a boy may inherit a criminal mind, but I certainly am sure he may inherit a susceptibility of criminality. Criminal tendencies in boys, however, can be controlled by training, but we must guard the weak spots and keep continually on watch."

Spare the rod if you can, but if you can't, buy a new hairbrush.

CHILD INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION

Joan, three-year-old daughter of Sewell Nevitt, E. Main St., linotype operator for The Gazette, was bruised on the head but not seriously hurt when an auto driven by Nevitt crashed into a car parked on the west side of N. Detroit St. during a blinding rain Thursday night. Nevitt, driving south, said the parked machine was facing in the wrong direction. The baby was slightly hurt when the impact hurled it under the steering wheel.
